Pa. Dairy Princess Coronation Set For September 22

CLARION (Clarion Co.)— Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services Inc. has announced that the 34th annual Dairy Princess Pageant will be held on Saturday evening, September 22, at the Sheraton Harrisburg-East. A milk punch reception will start at 5:30 p.m. followed by a banquet at 6:30 p.m. and the pageant.

Forty county dairy princesses will compete for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess now held by Anna Marie Mitchell of Berks County. The newly-elected princess will reign for a period of one year from September 1990 to September 1991. During that time she will represent the dairy farmers of Pennsylvania by speaking out for milk and all dairy products.

The pageant, which will be held on the Saturday evening preceding the annual All-American Dairy Week, will end two full days of activities and interviews for the contestants. Four judges, all from out-of-state, will select a Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and two alternatives from seven finalists.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Princess program is supported by Pennsylvania dairy farmers through their various advertising and promotion agencies: American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., Middle-Atlantic Milk Marketing Assn., Federal Order #36-Mideast UDIA, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program as well as the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, with contributions from other dairy-related organizations and individuals. Again this year, as the result of a grant from Sire Power, Inc. and several anonymous individuals, the awards to the winners

TIMONIUM, MD — Hobbie Hill Val Lizs First Gal owned by Amy Savage became this year's Miss Futurity at the beauty pagent held in the Cow Palace at the Maryland State Fair.

Amy said she hoped, but never dreamed she would win.

The dam of Miss Futurity, Midvalley Cathy Lite, was Amy's first 4-H dairy project, a former Grand Champion at the Montgomery County Fair, Junior All-Maryland three years in a row, and has been classified excellent. Miss Futurity is the only female offspring of Cathy Lite.

Distinguished guests were escorted into the arena in red and white convertibles to the music of the 4-H group, "The New Beginning." The guests were presented by master of ceremony, David Brauning. Guests included ringmaster Marion Andrews; Maryland Farm Bureau Queen Jenell Rinehart; Maryland Dairy Princess Stacey Guyton; County Princesses, Cynthia Fell, Heather Frey, Tanya Iager, and Jennifer

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Yes, total field acreage is dropping. And yes, there are less farms in the business this year than last. Despite that, Lancaster County still ranks number one in the state in the production of poultry, dairy, hogs, and cattle and calves.

Statistics taken from the annual "Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Crop and Livestock Annual Summary," to be published this October, were presented at a special press conference at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center Thursday.

Although the number of farms dropped by 60 from 1988 to 1989, and although total acreage of field

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

SEPT. 10-16, 1990

Sept. 11, auspicious day for reapers.

Sept 10, 1623, the first cargo from the Plymouth colony, lumber and furs, is shipped back to England Sept 11, 1850, Jenny Lind, "The Swedish Nightingale," makes her American debut in New York City Sept 14, 1716, the light is kindled in America's first lighthouse on Little Brewster Island, Boston Harbor Sept 16, 1620, the Mayflower set sail from Plymouth, England, bound for the New World Mouth and heart should never part

Ask the Old Farmer: What is the superstition about "sun-dogs" the old sailors used to talk about? L M , Va

No superstition about it! Sun-dogs, either in the morning or at night indicate a change of weather For those who don't know, they look sort of like a chunk chopped out of a rainbow

Home Hints. To keep brown sugar soft, put a few prunes in the container

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: A beautiful week — nothing but blue sky and sunshine The North Country has very warm temperatures (at around 66° F, it's 3° above average)

Greater New York-New Jersey: Scattered showers with locally heavy rains begin the week Most of the week is gloomy cloudy and unseasonably warm

Middle Atlantic Coastal: This week is all wet! Heavy rain and seasonably warm, with rain becoming more gentle by midweek Ending with a glimpse of the sun

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Most of the week is sunny and hot with some rain in the north Friday sees rain, heavy in the east, and the weekend is warm

OPINION

Don't Take Chances With Silo Gases

We are into silo filling time, and many farmers are already harvesting the corn crop to obtain the maximum feed nutrients they are able to obtain through this method of preserving feed for their animals over winter. But making silage can be hazardous to your health. With our large tower silos, the danger of poisonous gases becomes very important.

We urge our farmers to discuss this hazard with their employees and all family members. These gases can develop from one day to 14 days after the silo is filled. Most of the gases have a chlorine-laundry bleach odor and irritate the eyes and respiratory system. Some are yellow and some are colorless.

Jay Irwin, Lancaster County agent says that with the good growing season this year, farmers need to be even more cautious. The extra moisture sometimes produces more gas.

"Never work alone around the silo," Irwin cautions. "And always run the blower at least 20 minutes before you enter the silo."

Irwin said gas can also come down the entry shoot and get into the barn and harm the animals. "Farmers know about this problem," Irwin said, "But we all need to be reminded each year about the problem."

These gases are heavier than air and will come down to where you, your family, your employees and your animals live. Don't take chances with silo gases. They are deadly.

Editor:

You are to be commended for a fine editorial concerning the current oil crisis and our involvement in the Persian Gulf. I find it disgraceful and despicable that our country's greed and thirst for petroleum will force our young men to shed their lifeblood not in defense of our country, but to keep our sickening economy from dying. However, we as farmers can go further than just encouraging the development of the ethanol industry.

One example of alternative fuel usage ought to be readily apparent in Lancaster, that of draft horses. Much has been said about their pros and cons, so I won't reiterate them. I know the commitment of

NOW IS THE TIME

To Observe National Farm Safety Week

President Bush has proclaimed the week of September 16-22, 1990, as National Farm Safety Week, the 47th annual observance.

Every year thousands of farmers suffer from injuries and illnesses. This high rate could be reduced if farmers would invest in safety, such as proper personal protective equipment.

Personal protective equipment (PPE), such as goggles, hard hats, respirators, protective eyewear and safety shoes, has been available to farmers for a long time. Many farmers do use PPE when dealing with significant health hazards. However, far too many farmers seldom or never use PPE on farm jobs for which protection is needed.

When using liquid chemicals, wear goggles designed to protect eyes from splashes and sprays.

Respirators protect the lungs from many airborne health hazards on the farm, ranging from deadly silo and manure gases to longer term health threats from frequent exposure to dust, molds and chemicals.

Let's be "safety alert" and practice safe habits every day.

To Be Aware Of Swollen Hocks

Many times we associate swollen hock joints in cows with the type of stall beds they are lying upon, when in fact, the major cause may be foot problems which occurred several weeks or several months earlier, according to Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent.

Laminitis can be a major factor contributing to swollen hocks. This foot problem can be caused by feeding heifers and dry cows too much grain too soon after calving. The transition from a high forage ration before calving to a high grain ration after calving should be done very gradually over a period of 3-4 weeks.

Hoof care is also important. Heifers and cows that suffer from hoof injuries, overgrown toes and concrete stress are more apt to get laminitis and swollen hocks.

To Ensile Corn At The Proper Stage

Most of our corn crop looks good after a good growing season, and corn silage is an important part of the feeding program in dairy and feeder cattle. Harvesting corn at the right time is very important. I'd like to point out that more feed nutrients will be harvested if the ear can be allowed to mature into the early dent stage. Silage research reveals that corn made into silage in the silk stage will yield only 63% feed nutrients while corn in the dent stage should give silage with 69% feed nutrients.

The important thing is to allow the ear to develop properly before ensiling, if at all possible. Corn is a valuable crop; let's make every effort to harvest the maximum feed nutrients.

To Be Aware Of The Century Farm Program

The Century Farm Program is aimed at recognizing the efforts of Pennsylvania's farm families which have preserved the tradition of the rural heritage of the pioneer farm.

The program was started as part of the Nation's bicentennial observance in 1976, but is being continued for its value in promoting the ideals of the family farm and the importance of farming to Pennsylvania's economy.

To be eligible for Certification as a Pennsylvania Century Farm, a farm must have been owned by the same family for the last 100 consecutive years, and a family member must currently reside on the land. In addition, the farm must consist of ten or more acres of the original holdings or gross at least $1,000 a year from the sale of agriculture products.

We encourage you to participate in this program that is administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Applications are available at the County Extension Office.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

GOD DIDN'T ASK FOR A HOUSE

September 9, 1990

Background Scripture: 2 Samuel 7.

Devotional Reading: Psalms 132:1-12.

When I was a boy of 12, in those days just before the attack on Pearl Harbor, my uncle was in the U.S. Army stationed in Hawaii. One day about a month before Christmas, I saw in a department store window a box of individually-wrapped cheeses, crackers and so forth, made up especially to send to "our boys overseas." I decided that I would have to find some way to earn enough money to buy that package and send it to my Uncle John. For days I hounded my parents for chores, a loan, anything. I was absolutely committed to that project. It never dawned on me to ask someone if my uncle really liked cheese or if that was what he needed most. It was my idea and I wasn't going to let anything stand in my way!

One of the most consistent troubles God has with us is our tendency to become very zealous to do for God something he really doesn't want done. It would seem that we take up these projects for the best of reasons -- like the Crusades, the Inquisitions, the burning of "witches," and so forth. Presumably, this is for God's sake, but we often make the mistake of failing to ask him what he wants.

A GOOD IDEA?

So it was with King David. Secure and happy in his elegant new house in Jerusalem, he feels perhaps a little guilty that, in comparison, God still has nothing more impressive than the tent of the tabernacle. "See now," he tells the prophet Nathan, "I dwell in a house of cedar, but the ark of God dwells in a tent" (7:2). Who could fault David for an idea like that? It was something he was going to do for God. Think of the promotional possibilities: "Let's all get together and build God a house!" Even Nathan thought it was a good idea: "Go, do all that is in your heart; for the Lord is with you" (7:3).

It must have come as a shock to Nathan when, that same night, he received a revelation in which God told him very plainly that he did not need or want a house -- at least, not at that time. Many years ago, when I first read this story, I felt God was being just a bit tacky. If David wanted to build him a temple, why turn him down? His heart was in the right place, wasn't it?

GOD'S REASONS

Since then, however, I've realized that God had his reasons for saying no to David's building project. As a mere mortal, I can only guess at those reasons. For one thing, maybe God saw David's offer coming from a guilty conscience over the opulence of his own dwelling. Or maybe it was because God didn't want David and the kingdom to think that he was dependent upon them, but rather the other way around. David's plan was perhaps rather patronizing. Maybe God simply wanted to emphasize to David that what he really wanted from David was something quite different and building a temple would have only distracted David from God's true desire.

Our projects, no matter how well-motivated, often get in the way of God's plans. So, next time you set out to do something for God, why not ask him first what he wants?

HOW TO BE RIGHT ON THE NUMBER.

Start by planting AG673 and AG836, bred specifically for this region. Whether you're producing corn for grain or silage, they're right on the number for getting the most out of every acre.

Both of these outstanding Agway hybrids have been developed, tested and proven to perform under the demanding soil, climate and growing conditions in this area.

An acknowledged leader in seed corn research, Agway continues its efforts toward bringing you improved grain and dual-purpose silage/grain varieties that will result in more bushels per acre and more megacals of energy per ton.

Before you place your seed reservation, talk to your Agway Farm Enterprise, Reading Bone/ Agway or Andgrow salesperson. Find out which of these proven hybrids is best suited to your production requirements. It's the first step toward being right on the number.

PLANT MORE MILK.

More milk per acre means more profit per acre, and W-L Alfalfas have proven their advantage - in milk and in dollars.

For example, WL317 produced 148 pounds of milk per acre over the top competitors in recent tests conducted by W-L Research. The results were derived from a program that calculates milk production based of forage quality. These tests clearly show that, pound for pound, it means more to a dairyman to plant higher quality alfalfa with high yields, than to plant a high-yielding alfalfa with lower quality.

The potential dollars per acre advantage using W-L Alfalfa came in at $92 greater milk yield per acre over the top competing varieties. And, that milk per acre value advantage with W-L Alfalfa adds up to greater profitability.

Time after time, top producers have selected W-L Alfalfa varieties that reward them with high quality, low cost feed.

It all adds up to more milk - and more profit - per acre.

Plant W-L Alfalfas.

Mark Daughter Tops Lebanon Sale

SOUTH LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — A fresh 2-year-old Mark daughter and her calf topped a recent Holstein consignment sale at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

The young cow's and her calf, sired by Blackstar, brought $2,950.

It was consigned by Ray Bicksler, Richland, a prominent area Holstein breeder. Bicksler had also recently gained attention when one of his cows gave birth to triplet heifer calves, totaling five heifer calves in just more than a year.

The second highest selling milking consignment sold for $2,600 and the 17 fresh cows and heifers brought an average price of $1,730.

The top bred heifer, a Royalty daughter from Oakenbound Holsteins of Richland, sold for $2,600. There were 31 bred heifers averaged $1,730. Six open heifers averaged $725.

The sale was sponsored by the Lebanon County Holstein Club, with Gary Lentz serving as sale chairman. Harry Bachman was auctioneer and Dale Hoover was in charge of pedigrees.

The purpose of the sales is to provide a forum by which dairymen in a region can sell and buy Holstein animals for whatever needs they may have.

First Gal Selected Maryland Miss Futurity

Trout; National Holstein Director Marlin Hoff; State Fair Board President F. Grove Miller; Fair General Manager Howard Mosner; Maryland Holstein President Marlin Martin; and Judge Fowler Bransletter.

Dressed in tuxedos, Ring Master Andrews and Judge Bransletter gave the appearance of a royal occasion.

Anticipation grew in the audience as the participants paraded their eighteen prized Holsteins around the Cow Palace.

After careful consideration, Judge Bransletter dismissed the 10 finalists from the ring. He then gave his reasons for placing 11th through 18th.

Upon the return of the 10 finalists, Bransletter continued his search for Miss Futurity. As excitement continued to mount at ringside, five finalists were chosen. They were presented as a court as Miss Futurity paraded down the center amid the applause of the audience.

The Maryland Holstein Futurity is sponsored by the Maryland Holstein Association to stimulate interest in the breeding and exhibiting of outstanding registered Holsteins in Maryland. It recognizes the accomplishments of the small and the large breeder and the FFA and 4-H boy or girl.

The Futurity is based upon the nomination of an animal by its owner, to be shown in the futurity show in the year in which she is eligible.

Four payments are required for each animal that competes. The initial nomination is made as a calf with a fee of $2.50. Four dollars is paid with the renomination as a yearling, $6 as a 2-year-old and the final payment of $10 is due as a 3-year-old. This year, 647 animals were nominated as calves. At the end of the first year, this number dropped to 456, then 248 as 2-year-olds. The final nomination and payment included 84 entries. This number was reduced to 18 by show night. The purse this year ranged from $710 for first place to $60 for the 18th place winner. An additional $180 was awarded to the top six animals for their 2-year-old production records.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

-Fred Frey of Twin Oaks Farm, Quarryville R2, was the first entrant in the Quality Beef Carcass Contest sponsored by the Eastern National Livestock Exposition this year.

Frey, in entering one steer in the open competition and one in the carcass class, was the second entrant in the show behind George H. C. Arrowsmith, a Maryland cattleman, officials at the show announced recently.

-Lancaster County farmers returned only three committee chairmen and elected 13 new chairmen to the county Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Committee in mail balloting this week.

Those returned to office were Veryl Brown of Peach Bottom; Herbert Wiggins of Millersville R1, and John J. Herr, Mount Joy R1.

The chairmen will serve as delegates to the county convention on Sept. 22, the county office announced this week. At the convention the '61 Co. Committee and its chairman will be selected. Landis G. Becker, Lititz, has held the championship for 10 years.

-A trip to Longwood Gardens and Philadelphia to see the picture Ben Hur has been scheduled by Farm Women No. 6 for October 1, it was reported to the group by Mrs. Amos Brandt. The report was made at the Sept. 3 meeting of the society in the home of Mrs. Clarence Greiner, 729 Groff Ave., Elizabethtown.

Cohostesses along with Mrs. Greiner were Mrs. Simon Landis, Mrs. Charles Nissley, and Mrs. Charles Rife. Mrs. Landis was also in charge of devotions.

During the program, Mrs. Elmer Gibble, Fredericksburg, gave a demonstration on liquid embroidery.

The next scheduled meeting of the group is October 29. Mrs. C. R. Frey is news reporter for the group.

-Two communities will kick off the 1960 fair season in Lancaster County next week.

Exhibitions at Quarryville and Elizabethtown will get underway on Wednesday with parades and judges of bands and other units. The Quarryville parade is scheduled to start its route at 6:30 p.m. while at Elizabethtown, the marchers will move at 6:45 p.m.

OUR PLEDGE

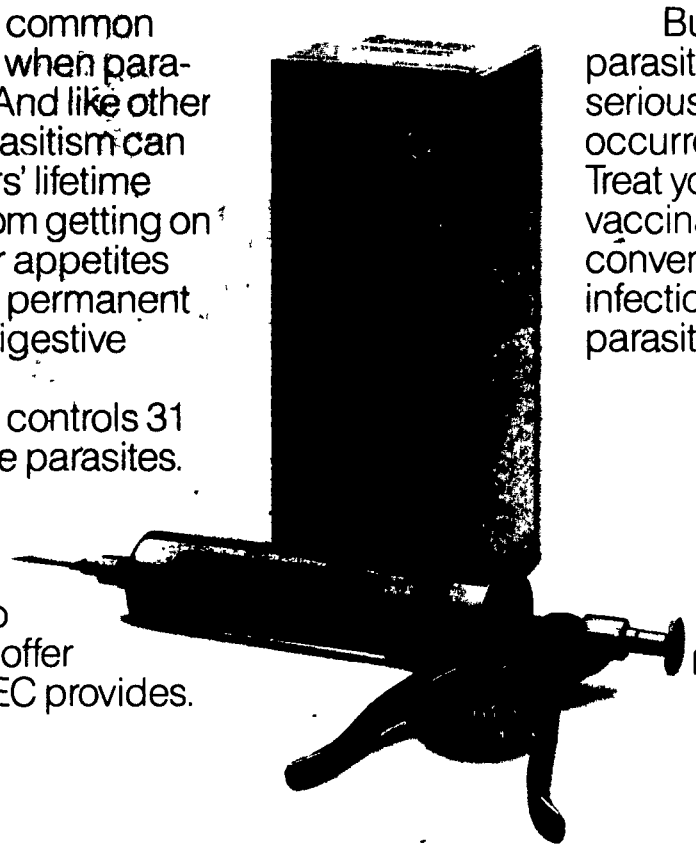
We pledge to provide products and services to increase the efficiency and profitability of America's farmers. We will continue breeding new hybrids with high yield potential — and with a balance of other key traits that give you the greatest potential for a successful crop. And that means more Earning Power for you. As a valued business partner, you have our commitment to delivering quality products and services. Our goal is your satisfaction.

WHEN YOU'RE VACCINATING YOUR HEIFERS AGAINST DISEASES, DON'T OVERLOOK TREATING ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT:

PARASITISM.

Parasitism, one of the most common diseases in heifers, occurs when parasites are left uncontrolled. And like other uncontrolled diseases, parasitism can adversely affect your heifers' lifetime productivity: delay them from getting on the milk line, suppress their appetites and, in severe cases, inflict permanent physical damage to their digestive systems.

IVOMEC® (ivermectin) controls 31 kinds of adult and immature parasites. And only IVOMEC can control both internal and external parasites at the same time. You'll find no other parasite product can offer the broad spectrum IVOMEC provides.



But, if you wait to see signs of parasitism, it may be too late. By then serious damage may have already occurred. So don't wait until it's too late. Treat your heifers with IVOMEC while vaccinating for other diseases. It's a convenient and easy way to prevent infectious diseases and help control parasitic disease at the same time.

(ivermectin)

Don't just think of what it eliminates, but what it creates.

New National Dairy Sales Strategy Unveiled

ARLINGTON, Va. — To increase the power of each dollar in dairy promotion and research, dairy industry leaders have developed a strategic marketing plan for the 1990s, according to Missouri dairy farmer Lester Evans.

Evans is chairman of the National Dairy Board, one of the organizations participating in the Strategic Marketing Alliance. The SMA formed a committee of 21 producers and promotion managers 18 months ago to develop a plan to pull the dairy industry together around a common marketing direction.

The Strategic Marketing Plan is designed to improve the return on research and promotion investment by making the dairy industry a tougher competitor in the 1990s.

"At the beginning, we agreed our core strategy is for the dairy industry to be market-driven in the 1990's," Evans said. "That means real consumer wants and needs will be revealed through consumer market research. Then promotion programs and product developments that meet these wants and needs will receive top priority."

Specifically, the strategic marketing plan directs the 15-cent promotion and research groups to:

• Choose current promotion priorities using market research as a guide; market segments will be evaluated for growth potential; distribution channel market segments will be targeted; nutrition and product research will respond to market segment needs.

• Establish a system to choose future promotion priorities; future market research will target major opportunities for increasing sales; all dairy product and milk component opportunities will be evaluated.

"The plan does not mean dairy products and consumers will see any drastic change in dairy promotion messages. It's a voluntary system that creates a common marketing strategy which every region can use to build upon their current program," Evans said.

When all of the recommended actions are in place, dairy industry market researchers estimate consumption of all dairy products will increase. For fluid milk consumption alone, researchers project a full percentage point more growth in consumption than the increase resulting from population growth. That's $64 million more in dairy farmers' pockets.

"It's possible to do this with better-targeted, more efficient marketing that channels the right products to the right consumer segments," Evans said. "Other marketers are doing it every day for Doritos, Snickers and Gatorade. Dairymen can do as well or better for milk, cheese and ice cream."

In addition to increasing consumption, the plan's recommended actions are designed to increase efficiency.

Over time, coordination towards common goals will save the dairy industry millions of dollars. To begin with, for example, coordination of education programs between NDB and the National Dairy Council has already saved dairymen $160,000 this year, Evans said.

Evans stressed that developing and unveiling the plan is only the first step. Successfully managing rapidly changing technology, new environmental issues and changing consumer preferences for the good of the dairy farmer, requires the cooperation and coordination of every part of the dairy industry, he said.

Dairy industry leaders and producers are invited to participate in a National Forum on the strategic marketing plan in Denver, October 1 and 2. NDB will release a summary of the Forum proceedings will be issued immediately following the Forum.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, was established by The Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

IMPORTANT: Look for the "parting line" on any barn cleaner chain you buy. It shows where excess metal has been trimmed off. It is your assurance that the link was totally forged, not just punched out of a flat steel bar with grain flow in one direction only.

You want a totally-forged link because forging changes the grain of the steel, causing it to curve in unbroken flow lines around the contours of the link, giving the link greater strength to serve you longer.

Mona Lisa Is Maryland State Supreme Champion

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

TIMONIUM, MD — The magnificently royal C Hanson Prestar Mona Lisa claimed her reward as Supreme Champion over all breeds after being named Grand Champion Holstein at the Maryland State Fair on Monday. Owned by Gay Ridge Farms, the Ex94 Mona Lisa has other honorable recognitions to her credit. In 1986 she was named Honorable Mention All American as a Senior Yearling. As a two-year old, in 1987, she became Reserve All American and All Canadian. She claimed Reserve All American again in 1988 as a three year old. The highlight came in 1989 when, as a four year old, she won the All American Title. Along with having outstanding type, Mona Lisa is also a hard worker. While making her three year old record of 30,838 lbs. of milk, 1,388 lbs. of fat, and 937 lbs. of protein, she peaked at 130 lbs. per day.

Judging the 185 entries in the Holstein Show was Fowler Bransletter, from Emdonton, Kentucky. Mr. Bransletter is a Guernsey, Holstein and Brown Swiss Breeder. He owns the National Grand Champion Guernsey, and has judged All American Holstein Shows as well as other National Breed Shows.

Gay Ridge and Kingstead Farms three year old C Aitkenbrae Starbuck Ada was selected Reserve Senior and Reserve Grand Champion. The first and second place winners in the Senior Yearling Class were named Junior and Reserve Junior Champions. Champion - C Weenbrook Sally Vantage owned by Gay Ridge and Kingstead Farm; Reserve - Half-N-Half Warden Sunday, owned by Heffner, Heath, Andrew & Voss.

Judge Bransletter selected OCS Dairy Phils Candy shown by Crystal Smith as the Best Bred and Owned Maryland Cow. Crystal was presented a trophy from the Maryland Holstein Association in memory of Doty Remsburg. The Ross Smith Family of My-Ladys Manor Farm was chosen premier breeder and received the Ralph Walker Trophy. The Smith Family has bred and shown many excellent holsteins. When Judge Bransletter selected his first place senior best three females, Savage Leigh Farm was named 1990 Premier Exhibitor and also received a Ralph Walker Trophy.

Somerset Co. Junior Dairy Show Parades 150 Cows

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — The Junior Dairy Show at the Somerset County fair lasted about six hours as approximately 150 dairy cows underwent a thorough inspection by the two judges. Tom Boyer, York, judged the animals for type while Carol Schurman, Indiana County, made the final decision about showing and fitting.

With his B.S. in dairy husbandry from Delaware Valley College, Boyer said his own dairy consists of some 45 Holstein cows. He has done evaluations for the American Breeder Service. "I learn something new each time I do a show," he said.

Schurman is a county extension agent and 4-H coordinator for Indiana County. Originally from Cumberland County, Schurman said she, herself, showed cattle for years.

Of the five cattle breeds shown, the larger Holstein seemed to be the favorite of the FFA and 4-H members who kept their chins up despite soggy conditions around the barns following several days of rain. They did a fine job of showing.

Named the premier cow, 4-year-old Sec-Win Chaplain Rachel, is owned by Brett Sechler of Somerset. C-Hanoverhill Chaplain-ET is Rachel's sire. Her dam is Sec-Win Ultimate Raven. Breeder was James W. Sechler and Baldwin C. Winters of Somerset.

The Brown Swiss champion was owned by Robert Fritz of Garrett and the Jersey class champion was owned by Jacob Baughman of Glencoe. Just four calves represented the Guernsey and Ayrshire dairy classes.

Grand Opening Showcases Expanded Farm Store

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — Few things tell more about a community than its businesses — especially successful small businesses.

A walk through the aisles of the E.M. Herr Farm and Home Center, just south of the city of Lancaster, tells its own story.

One wall is full with pitchforks and shovels. Another area has blue jean jackets, plaid short sleeve shirts, work boots, cowboy boots and stretch denim dress pants.

There are also special devices for rain gutters, home repair equipment, lumber, nails, washers, paint ...

It seems to indicate a mixed community — one made of both families who live in the new homes of suburban growth and farm families.

Such observations are made daily by Marvin Herr, founder and president of the E.M. Herr company.

He said that for more than a year he's been trying to bring his farm and home center more in line with community demands.

The new word from Herr is: "One-stop-shopping."

The 60-year-old, Lancaster-born agri-businessman said changes in the community have changed demand. There are more people coming to him with needs for basic household items and lawn and garden supplies.

And they don't want to have to drive all over Lancaster County to get these things, he said.

According to Herr, his customers have told him they not only face higher gas prices, but city traffic is congestive and often confusing for the unfamiliar.

In response, Herr has expanded his business once more.

"We've been here for 10 years. The business has increased to the point that we thought we'd like to add more items to care of our customers' requirements," he said.

Dennis Herr stocks rain gutter and accessories on new shelves installed in the 20,000 square-foot expansion at E.M. Herr Farm and Home Center in Willow Street.

Like a constantly metamorphasing being, the Herr business has had several different identities over the past 33 years.

He said he didn't start out to build a business such as the one that exists today. The family business grew out of his desire to meet some basic needs of his agricultural community.

A direct decendent from Hans Herr, one of the original European settlers in the area whose home is now a historic landmark, Marvin started out as a farmer. He lives where he was born. Hans is Marvin's ninth-grand father.

ULTRAFLO OUT-PERFORMS CHAIN

45 Million Birds In 5 Years Prove It

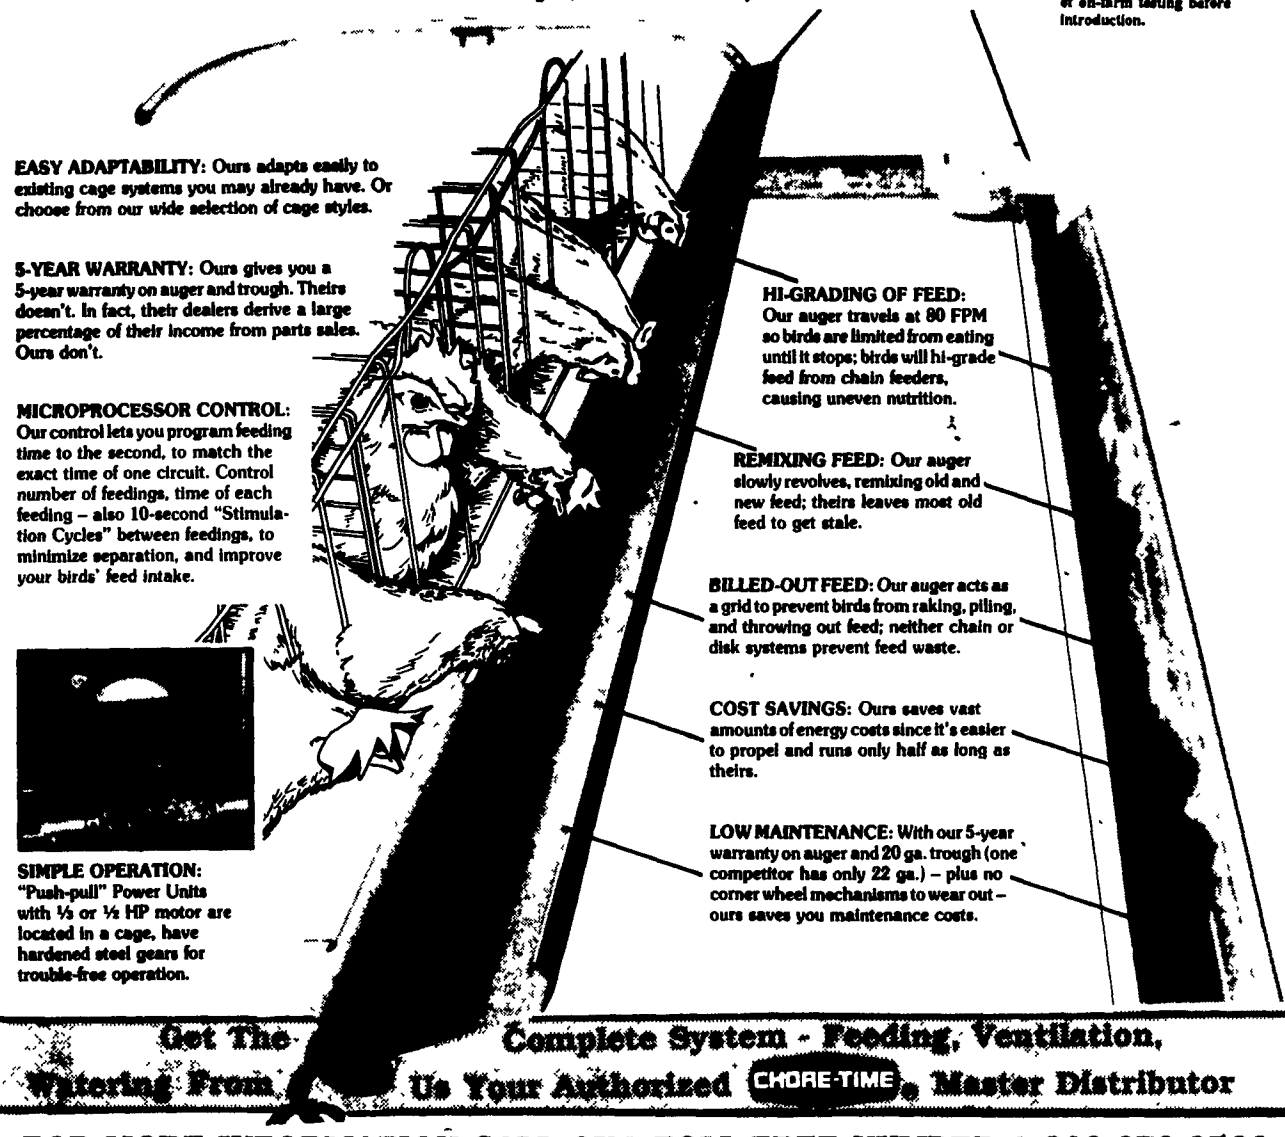
Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® feeder for layers, pullets and breeders

We have probably been too modest up to now about the merits of our new generation ULTRAFLO® cage feeder vs. the old style chain feeders some of our competitors are still trying to sell you. In fact, the only negative comments about our feeder come from our competition, not our customers. So we would like to point out the bare facts:

FEED SAVINGS: On-farm results show a feed savings of ½ lb. per 100 birds per day – over $10,000 per year savings on a 100,000-bird house. Year after year.

TROUBLE-FREE DESIGN: Our feeder has only two moving parts – the one-piece auger plus each drive wheel; their chain has more. Our corners are heavy 12 ga. zinc plated tubing for long life; their corners have a reputation for trouble and short life.

PROVEN DESIGN: Over 45 million birds are already on our feeder worldwide. Also, it was proven in 5 years of on-farm testing before introduction.



EASY ADAPTABILITY: Ours adapts easily to existing cage systems you may already have. Or choose from our wide selection of cage styles.

5-YEAR WARRANTY: Ours gives you a 5-year warranty on auger and trough. Theirs doesn't. In fact, their dealers derive a large percentage of their income from parts sales. Ours don't.

MICROPROCESSOR CONTROL: Our control lets you program feeding time to the second, to match the exact time of one circuit. Control number of feedings, time of each feeding – also 10-second "Stimulation Cycles" between feedings, to minimize separation, and improve your birds' feed intake.

HI-GRADING OF FEED: Our auger travels at 80 FPM so birds are limited from eating until it stops; birds will hi-grade feed from chain feeders, causing uneven nutrition.

REMIXING FEED: Our auger slowly revolves, remixing old and new feed; theirs leaves most old feed to get stale.

BILLED-OUT FEED: Our auger acts as a grid to prevent birds from raking, piling, and throwing out feed; neither chain or disk systems prevent feed waste.

COST SAVINGS: Ours saves vast amounts of energy costs since it's easier to propel and runs only half as long as theirs.

LOW MAINTENANCE: With our 5-year warranty on auger and 20 ga. trough (one competitor has only 22 ga.) – plus no corner wheel mechanisms to wear out – ours saves you maintenance costs.

SIMPLE OPERATION: "Push-pull" Power Units with ⅓ or ½ HP motor are located in a cage, have hardened steel gears for trouble-free operation.

Chimney Lining and Relining

Expanded Farm Store

His youngest son Douglas Herr continues to manage a 400-acre farm raising crops and livestock. Incidentally, a portion of the existing farm is part of the original land grant from William Penn.

Marvin Herr started the family farm and home supply business simply.

Operating out of his barn, in 1957 he started selling poultry equipment to neighbors. As people came to him asking for other items, such as beef and hog raising equipment, his barn became filled with a wider selection of items.

The business, as is the case with most successful small businesses, started very small and began growing.

The site for the farm and home center was purchased in the 1970s and Marvin and his wife opened a farm and hardware store in 1980.

Now the Herrs employ more than 25 people and offer more than 20,000 items, from basic clothing and footwear needs to lawnseed, farm motors, storage bins and livestock confinement systems.

Marvin is president of the company which owns the farm and home center. His wife Yvonne is vice president. Their son Dennis is equipment manager and Jeff Miller is the store manager.

The concept of the store is to provide supplies for the farm and suburban community. Marvin said he tries to stock the basic requirements for running a farm and for taking care of a home, lawn and garden.

Recent building expansion has doubled floor space to 40,000 square feet. A repair shop has been added to service lawn and garden tractors and small motors. He added more storage area and some additional office space.

The new version of the Herr business is to be unveiled Friday, September 14, with the startup of a six-day grand opening celebration.

Another change planned is an expansion of business hours. September 10 the store is to be open six days a week, from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Those who visit the store, located along Rt. 272 about five miles south of Lancaster, can expect to see items from 20 different departments. Four of the departments are new, the others have been expanded.

Herr has added a lumber and building materials department for the do-it-yourself customer, a gifts department, housewares department, and a rental department.

His other departments include farm toys and sporting goods; sprayers; storage tanks and accessories; fencing; pet supplies and feeds; automotive supplies; lawn and garden; parts and service department for machines and products sold by the store; clothing; plumbing; electrical; paints; grain handling systems, inlcuding equipment for drying and all accessories; hog and livestock confinement and feeding systems; a large hardware department; and animal health supplies.

And if customers can't find what they want, Herr will custom order.

"We belong to two national buying groups. ACE is a dealer owned buying group," he said. "That's how we stay competitive."

Being a direct member of both Farm Store National Buying Group and ACE Hardware enables Herr to have quick access to items that other small businesses can't get. It also helps small businesses like Herr's to keep prices low and on line with large retail chains.

"We sell basic necessities that people buy and need," Herr said.

But he repeated himself several times and spoke very clearly: "We will not forget our agricultural customers. In fact we increased some lines in agriculture; that's what we started with."

According to Herr, the community he serves is now about 50-50 suburbia and agriculture-based rural. However, he said suburban growth apparently will continue to expand and influence the community.

"We're still in the country ... this area, close to the city, will have a continuing suburban growth because we have the facilities (infrastructure)," he said.

He said he sees the trends to include more hobby farmers and large farms taking over from independent family farms.

"We cater to both (in addition to family farms and suburbians)," Herr said. "You have to stay with the times or you won't survive."

But the Herr operation isn't restricted to local community. Over the years the store's reputation has increased the area it serves. Now the Herrs also deal with farmers in a four-state region.

Unlike other areas in the United States where successful family businesses have been bought out by investing corporations or merged with other companies, the Lancaster area is still heavy with small to medium-sized family owned and run businesses.

Herr offered that perhaps the strong agriculture tradition and even the area's religious influence could be a factor.

He said it seems that, in general, family businesses in the Lancaster area aren't based for quick-profits and short terms.

The business attitude the Herr family seems to have is similar to that of many in agriculture: a business has to be worked every day and it must be managed to last for at least one lifetime, and with hope, several.

From the left, Dennis Herr and Jeff Miller show off a new display of their basic farm and home motors, pulleys and hand implements.

Focus On Forage Quality

Late summer and early fall is a crucial time for dairymen. What they do, or fail to do, at this time of the year can have a major impact on how well their herds will do the rest of the year, and on how profitable their herds will be. Two major areas of concern are forage harvesting and calving. This column will focus on forage harvesting and forage quality. Calving will be addressed later.

One of our top priorities is to put up high quality forage for the dairy herd. As you probably know, forage quality has a great impact on dry matter intakes, twisted stomachs, milk production and fat tests. It also affects the amount of grain and purchased feeds needed.

When comparing the profitability of various feeds for the dairy farm, we frequently look at crop yields or nutrient yields per acre. Then, we assign a value per ton, per bushel or per unit of nutrient yield to calculate crop value per acre. This can be misleading because it does not consider the effect these nutrients have on milk production and herd health, and the multiplying effect that a little extra milk and improved health can have on the real value of these harvested crops.

What is the real impact of forage quality on the bottom line? Let's make it a few assumptions and then assign some figures to our assumptions. Situations vary a lot from farm to farm, so if you don't like the figures that were used in the following illustration, substitute your own.

Let's assume we are growing 0.33 acre of corn silage per cow. The corn crop yields 24 tons of silage per acre and costs $280 per acre to raise (includes labor, land charge, taxes, interest, insurance, depreciation and repairs, plus seed, chemicals, fertilizer, fuel and field operations). By feeding good quality, highly digestible silage, milk production increases 1000 lbs. per cow per year; that's about 3 lbs. more per day. This increased milk production, along with better fat tests and the need for less purchased feed, improves returns over feed costs about $70 per cow per year. This increased profit amounts to about half of the value of the additional milk produced.

The 1000 lbs of additional milk represents about a 5-6% increase in milk production. The $70 additional profit per cow is about a 10-15% increase in herd profits; that's about twice as much as the increase in production.

The $70 additional profit per cow would permit you to grow an additional 0.25 acres of corn if it costs $280 to grow an acre of corn. Looking at it another way, we could grow 0.33 acres of "poorer quality" silage at 24 tons per acre or 0.58 acres of "high quality" silage at 14 tons per acre and have almost the same profit. Notice I said almost. If we tie up more acres in silage production, we have less acres for other crops. That means we have to buy more feed or we have fewer crops to sell.

What does all of this really mean? It means that high quality feeds, which we need for improving milk production, are very valuable. But, there is a limit as to how much more we can afford to spend for them, either to grow them and store them, or to purchase them. Costs and returns must be carefully considered. Fortunately though, good quality forages don't cost a lot more to produce.

It also means you can sacrifice some crop yields, if necessary, in order to get the quality of feed you need for good production.

Harvesting Concerns

Now is the time to focus on putting up the best quality corn silage possible. Harvest at the right moisture and maturity. Ideally, the ear and stalk should dry down at about the same rate. Some grain hybrids are bred for rapid dry down of the ear. This is good for grain production because it allows you to harvest the grain earlier, while the stalks still have enough life and strength to stand. However, such hybrids may not make the best silage. By the time the stalks are dry enough to ensile the kernels may be too hard for good digestibility. Similarly, if the stalk becomes too dry or too mature it becomes lignified. This reduces digestibility and the energy value of the silage; dry matter intakes are off, milk production is down, fat tests are off, and more cows are being treated for twisted stomachs.

Ideally, the milk line should be about half way down the kernel for ensiling. At this stage, the kernel is dented and fairly mature, but still soft enough to be easily digested. At this maturity, many hybrids will have a moisture con-

JAMESWAY

All-forged Hook-Link® chain... available on Super 300 and Super 500 barn cleaners

Extra thick steel at all wear points

IMPORTANT: Look for the "parting line" on any barn cleaner chain you buy. It shows where excess metal has been trimmed off. It is your assurance that the link was totally forged, not just punched out of a flat steel bar with grain flow in one direction only.
You want a totally-forged link because forging changes the grain on the steel, causing it to curve in unbroken flow lines around the contours of the link, giving the link greater strength to serve you longer.

Families Big Part Of Colored Breeds Show

VAL VAN TASSEL
Berks Co. Correspondent

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Fair Colored Breeds Show is definitely a family affair.

Dominated by 4-H and FFA entries, competition tends to be between brothers and sisters, cousins, and neighbors.

Such was the case during the Jersey show. Jessica Haag, Mohrsville, was sure her brother Michael would win the championship. "I was so surprised when the judge picked my cow for grand champion. I thought for sure she'd pick my brother," Jessica said. When the judge, Patricia Stroup of North Carolina, announced her choice, Jessica gave her junior two-year-old a kiss.

Stoup said the cow, Wilderness Grits Beauty, had the best udder in the show as well as fine general confirmation.

The reserve went to Jennifer Neiman. Jennifer's sister Jill, Berks County's Little Miss Dairy Princess, gave the cow a big hug after the show was over.

Stroup, a Jersey breeder, faced her toughest task of the day choosing a junior champion from 19 entries. Cathleen Ohlinger's senior yearling received the nod with a intermediate calf owned by Suzanne Dietrich, Hamburg, getting the reserve.

Susan, Amy and Daniel Hollenbach, Bernville R.D.1, captured all the championship awards for the Guernsey breed. Susan, a member of the Hamburg FFA, had the top award with her three-year-old Blue Mt. View Alicia. Susan also showed Daniel's junior champion, an intermediate yearling.

Amy, a member of the Northern Berks 4-H, picked up both reserve honors.

Susan confessed she was worried about the grand champion honors this year. "Rebecca Snyder brought some beautiful animals to the fair." Snyder, Oley, won all the age classes her animals were shown in.

Another Hamburg FFA member, Randy Balthaser, showed his aged Brown Swiss to the grand championship. Wind Mill Balison Gilda was also the grand champion at the FFA District Show.

Balthaser, also a member of the Western Berks Dairy Club, had the reserve Brown Swiss as well as the reserve junior champion of the open show. Balthaser's intermediate yearling, Northkill Creek N-Oreo, was the junior champion of the youth show and his second intermediate yearling entry was named the reserve.

Pinesedge Farm, Shoemakersville, showed the open junior champion, Pinesedge Simon Doll. Steph Orth, a beginning showman, exhibited the animal.

Pinesedge Farm and the Samuel Yoder family are best known for their milking shorthorns. The family, complete with the youngest showmen at the event, nearly dominated the breed. Five-year-old Keil Yoder did grandma and grandpa proud, showing the junior calf to the junior championship.

Kellen Yoder marched the grand champion, Pinesedge Cherry Pat, around the ring. Jennie Grimes lent a helping hand showing the reserve animal, Kingsdale Peri 77, a three-year-old.

According to grandmother Phyllis Yoder, a number of the grandchildren can't wait to reach 4-H age.

Dwayne Brensinger had all the champions in the youth division and the reserve junior champion in the open show.

Chris Blatt, Robesonia, dreamed of combining two cows into one at the Ayrshire show. Chris, who exhibited the grand and reserve champions, agreed with Stroup's assessment of the animals. "The champion has a good udder but the reserve has more dairy character. If I could put them together, then I'd really have a cow," said Blatt.

Andrea Koinski, Mohrsville, had the junior champion with a senior yearling. Jed Vail won the reserve with his junior yearling, Karlyn R. Command's Keeley.

Andrea Koinski, right, had the junior champion Ayrshire while Jed Vail exhibited the reserve.

Keil Yoder can't wait to join the 4-H. He showed his grandparents' Pinesedge entry to the junior championship. Dwayne Brensinger, left, had the reserve champion.

Pinesedge Farm won both the grand and reserve championship for the Milking Shorthorn breed. Kellen Yoder showed the grand champion with a little help from Nedra Koller, right. Jennie Grimes, better known for showing Holsteins, gave the Yoders a helping hand. Suzann Moyer, Berks Co. Dairy Princess, completes the picture.

Susan Hollenbach, right, also showed her brother Daniel's intermediate yearling to the junior championship for the Guernsey breed. Amy Hollenbach had the reserve champion.

DOEBLER INTRODUCES

Two new alfalfas for the East

by Bill Camerer

You asked for them. Eastern alfalfas with big ton production and a new, higher level of winter hardiness and disease resistance. The search wasn't easy. But here they are. Two new alfalfas that meet your tough standards:

DOEBLER STARMASTER

Outstanding winter hardiness helps this alfalfa ride out hard Eastern winters. But what impressed us most was Starmaster's big production edge over long time Eastern favorites. Look at these 1986 trials: 2nd out of 62 alfalfas at Penn State. 1st out of 15 at Virginia's North Piedmont Experiment Station. 2nd out of 16 in New York.

DOEBLER PRECEDENT

Winter hardy, for sure. And just what the doctor ordered where four cuttings are normal. Precedent is resistant to six major diseases, including Aphanomyces root rot. No alfalfa does better.

And that means bigger yields year after year. At Penn State's Rock Springs in 1988, Precedent baled six tenths of a ton more than trial average. Or an extra $72 per acre.

Doebler's growing greener . . . with two new alfalfa varieties. I'm Bill Camerer with one of our research plots at Jersey Shore. Twenty-five alfalfas are on test.

Farm Forum

farming totally with horses is not for everyone or every farm. But it is a rare farm that could not put a team to good, economical use for jobs where a tractor would be less fuel efficient. Remember, the feed (fuel) for a team can be 100% homegrown, thus lessening a farmers dependence on oil, increasing his profits and strengthening the economy as a whole. A farmer actually becomes a producer of fuel, not a complete consumer. Draft horses, not men!

Another example is farming based on what the gov't has unfortunately coined "LISA". Sustainable agriculture is successfully practiced on many farms, to one degree or another. We all know the basics and what LISA means is crop rotation, IPM cover crops, etc.

I'm afraid "LISA" conjures up ideas of organic wastelands that used to be farms. That is not the case on plenty of farms throughout the state. By reducing herbicides, fertilizers, and the application of these oil-based products, farmers could again use less oil, be less dependent on others and thereby increase the dollar value of whatever they produce.

Think about it. I believe that both these examples can be put to use to some degree or another, on every farm. Farmers ought to consider them and start putting them to use, before our oil-based, so-called economy dies and forces them to adapt to these practices.

tent of approximately 65%, which is about right for ensiling. For very tall silos, where seepage is a problem, 60% moisture may be more ideal; 70% may be needed for good compaction in stacks, trenches and bunkers.

For high moisture corn, it is desirable to let the kernel mature, as indicated by the formation of the black layer at the base of the kernel, where the kernel attaches to the ear. At this stage, the kernel is drier and it has accumulated the maximum amount of nutrients.

Chop silage fine enough for good packing, but avoid chopping it too fine. Corn silage is a good source of fiber, but fine chopping destroys the effectiveness of the fiber. If corn gets too dry (below 60%) it may be necessary to chop the crop more finely in order to get good compaction. If the kernels are mature and hard, avoid the temptation of chopping the crop finely in order to crack the kernels; chances are, the digestibility you gain from cracking the grain will not be enough to make up for the losses that occur from reducing the effectiveness of the fiber due to the finer chop.

It is important to remember that when the digestibility of the forage is reduced because of lignification (too dry or too mature), or when the effectiveness of the fiber is reduced by chopping the forage too fine, losses occur in two ways: 1.) the feeding value of the forage is reduced directly, and 2.) the digestibility of other ingredients in the remainder of the ration is also reduced.

Feeding Hot, Uncured Silage

Many dairymen find themselves in situations where they are forced to feed hot or uncured silage during the harvest season. This can be very costly because cows can go off feed, with a resultant drop in milk production and fat test and an increase in displaced abomasums. Cows also tend to recover from these problems rather slowly.

Ideally, it is nice to have an extra silo of cured silage to feed from while other silos are being filled and cured. This is something to consider when building new silos. Having more smaller silos might be beneficial over having a few large silos; it will cost more, but that is the price you pay for more feeding flexibility.

More smaller silos may not be a practical alternative for many farmers, so they need to explore other possibilities. One alternative might be to fill a small stack or bag this harvest season, and save it to feed from during next year's harvest season. Or, consider planting different maturing hybrids at different dates. Planting a short season hybrid early next spring might give you a several-week head start on silo filling next year. The early harvest could be cured and ready to feed by the time you get to the main harvest. Some disadvantages of this are, you have the inconvenience of two harvests, and the short season hybrids may not be your first choice of hybrids to plant for silage.

Rate Your Silages And Feed Them Effectively

Carry a notebook in your pocket and make notes as to how well various hybrids dry down for ensiling, how well they ear out and how well they yield. As you feed these silages throughout the year also note how well they test, and most importantly, how well cows respond to them. Then, use this valuable information as you select hybrids for next year and as you prepare for the harvest season.

Once the harvest season is completed, inventory and analyze your forages. Then, work closely with your nutritionist to balance your rations in a manner that will enable you to make the best use of the feeds you have in storage while also sustaining high levels of efficient milk production along with good tests, good health and good conception.

Lehigh 4-Hers Top Kutztown Market Swine

VAL VAN TASSEL
Berks Co. Correspondent

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Amy Wehr and Brian Eschbach, members of the Lehigh Co. 4-H, exhibited the grand and reserve champion at the Kutztown Fair market swine show. Amy and Brian beat out 89 other entries in Kutztown's biggest swine contest in four years.

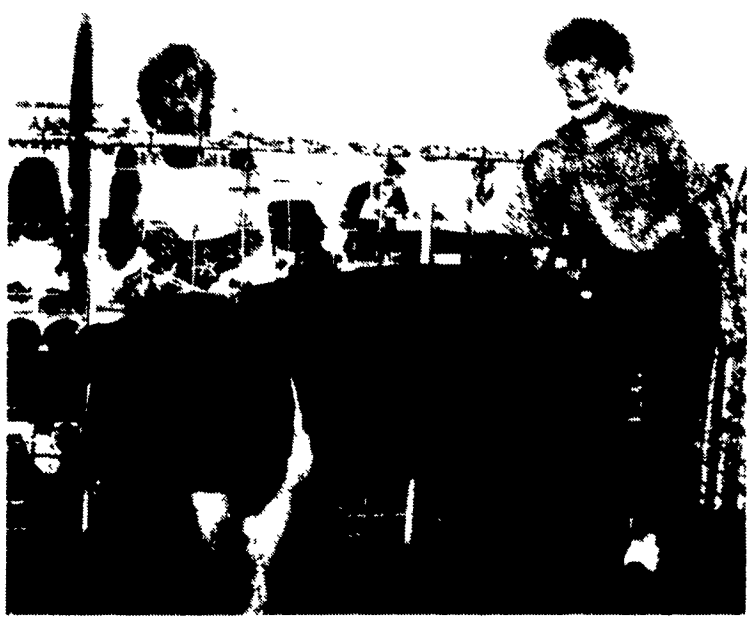
Amy, of Orefield, was only showing for her second year. Her 253-pound crossbred was purchased from Terry Bennecoff. Amy was looking forward to selling her hog at the Lehigh Co. 4-H roundup and sale August 22.

The reserve, a 190-pound gilt, won't be seeing the market anytime soon. "He's a pure bred Duroc and we're going to take him home for breeding," said Brian's mother Kathy.

The Eschbachs have a small breeding operation at Kempton R.D. 1. "We've been trying to breed the perfect show pig. The middleweight is home-bred, so we must be getting closer," she said. Brian and his brother Timothy, had three weight class winners.

Lehigh County was strong in the heavy classes. Berks County 4-H'ers had the most strength in the light classes because of their relatively late roundup date, September 26.

Judge Ted Teaford of Albright Mills appreciated Chris Blatt's long, meaty hog. He picked the 168-pound hog as his lightweight champion. The reserve lightweight honors went to Mark Gelsinger, R.D. 1 Womelsdorf.



Amy Wehr of the Lehigh 4-H exhibits her 253-pound champion at the Kutztown Fair market show.

Showing and fitting championships belonged to Lehigh County. Mark Lazarus and Steven Wessner were the champion and reserve showmen.

Jason Wisser and April Lazarus were the champion and reserve showmen.

Breeding swine competition was light, according to the exhibitors.

Daniel Hartman, Mertztown, had the grand champion Berkshire, Chester White, Duroc, and Yorkshire. Hartman got started in breeding hogs four years ago and now has 47 breeding sows. The Durocs and Chester Whites are the newest additions to the farm. The Durocs were introduced two years ago and the Chester Whites have become part of the operation in the last year.

Cheryl Bennecoff, Kutztown R.D.2, and her two-year-old son, Todd, exhibited the top Polland Chinas. The Bennecoff family is involved in several breeds of swine, but Cheryl said the Polland Chinas were added to the operation just for her.

Jennifer Rabenold, Kutztown R.D.2, beat her brother, Todd, to take the grand championship for Hampshires.

Steve Wessner, New Tripoli R.D.2, exhibited Landrace to top the breed.

All competitors were looking forward to more competition at the Allentown Fair.

Todd Rabenold of the Kutztown FFA had the grand champion carcass animal. Rabenold's animal placed fourth in the on-the-foot judging and first in the on-the-rail judging.

Brian Eschbach, right, poses with his middle weight champion while his brother Tim holds the hurdle.

Reserve honors went to Bryan Cooper, Lenhartsville, R.D.1.

Lancaster County's Ag Still Number 1

crops dropped by about 6,000 acres, Lancaster County still maintains its number one rank compared to other counties in the state.

"With the close of 1989, we ended up with an $822 million agriculture," said Jay Irwin, Lancaster County extension director, who presented the results. "And that exceeded the 1988 high of $741 million — so we surpassed that by $80 million, and that's a significant amount."

Poultry industry

Irwin said the recovery of the poultry industry — which survived 22 straight months of depressed prices — spearheaded the recovery. The broiler industry continues to demand older, meatier birds, and coupled with lower feed grain costs, helped make the industry number one in the county and the state.

"Dairy, traditionally in the past, has been the top ag industry in the county," said Irwin. "But that has changed this year. The poultry industry has taken the number one spot."

Dairy farmers have benefited from increased prices for milk — in 1988, farmers received $13.10 CWT compared to 1989, which boosted prices $1.40, to $14.50 CWT. The broiler industry, on the other hand, went from $.33 per pound to $.37 per pound, but the heavier bird increased the volume of meat produced.

Egg prices soared from $.40 per dozen to $.56 per dozen from 1988 to 1989. Many poultry producers took about a half million birds out of the business, according to Irwin, because many felt they wanted no more interference from the government.

Cattle and calves

The market for cattle and calves increased by $2.30 CWT between 1988 and 1989, from $66.40 CWT to $68.70 CWT. There was no increase in the price of hogs — at $43.60 CWT both years — but the number of units in the county increased by 7,000.

A significant increase occured in vegetable production, particularly in the eastern part of the county, in 1989. The dollar value of all vegetable crops rose from $6.78 million to about $10 million. More farmers are opting to raise vegetables and fruit, which require more labor but produce more dollar-value crop per acre.

"The top cash crop in Lancaster County remains tobacco," said Irwin. "Tobacco is a great crop to pay off mortgages." Irwin said because of exports to Japan and other countries, dollar value of the cash crop rose from about $14.3 million to more than $22.5 million in 1989.

Irwin said that 1990 may prove to be a good year for corn, and a record-breaking year for wheat, barley, and oat yields because of the ideal weather conditions.

"We represent around 22 to 24 percent of Pennsylvania's agriculture right here in one county," he said. "Lancaster County is still the number one non-irrigated agricultural county in the United States. We're maintaining that position. We're not only maintaining it, but we're putting a stronger hold on it than before."

This chart shows the agricultural statistics for Lancaster County from 1987-1989. Although the official summary won't be out until October this year, this report was compiled from preliminary information to appear in the "Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Crop and Livestock Annual Summary," and shows that Lancaster County's poultry producers are running ahead of the dairy industry in the county. Both industries, however, rank number 1 in the state. Note how total number of farms have dropped from 1988-1989, in addition to a dropoff in field crop acres, attributed to farms going out of business.

PA Dairy Princess

will be $1,200 to the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess with the two alternates receiving $500 and $400 respectively.

In addition, three girls will receive $100 awards for outstanding original dairy promotion presentations and two will receive $50 awards for compiling scrapbooks which chronicle their dairy princess activities. The contestants themselves will select the coveted "Miss Congeniality" award from among their own ranks.

The primary purpose of the Dairy Princess program in Pennsylvania is the promotion of the Dairy Industry and its products on the local grass roots level. Incentive Awards will be given to the counties whose last year's princess and her committee completed the incentive requirements. This year 28 counties will be recognized.

In addition, an individual award of $300 will be given to the young lady who stood out as the outstanding dairy promoter during her county reign. This award is entitled the "Tina Shultz Memorial Award" in memory and honor of the outstanding young lady who, in May 1986, succumbed to cancer during her reign as Huntingdon County Dairy Princess.

Pa. Dairy Princess and Promotion Services announces that the Saturday morning presentation session will be open to the public free of charge. It will run from 8:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon in the Sheraton Ballroom.

Saturday evening, September 22, promises to be an exciting evening for 40 county contestants and their families as well as for our Pennsylvania Dairy Industry.

Tickets for the event are $15 per person and are available on a "first come" basis from Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., 214 South Street, Box 640, Clarion, PA 16214 or call (814) 226-7470.

Portrait Of A Lancaster County Family

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — For a person who has never liked history, Esther Mae Longenecker Hiestand of Marietta certainly has done her share of compiling it in a book, "Pitchforks And Pitchpipes."

Open the 500-page book, and Lancaster County history from the early 1800s to the present becomes alive. You'll peek into the memories, diaries, recipe boxes, scrapbooks, and photo albums of 44 grandchildren of Lavina Royer Bender and Christian Garber Longenecker.

The stories do more than recount events, dates, and facts, they reveal personal passion, pain, hope, despair, success, and failure.

Even those who aren't Longeneckers, become engrossed in the stories that reveal emotions as they cope with changing lifestyles, and social and economical pressures.

The stories tell of hard work, good food, depression years, and the excitement of getting electricity, the first car and indoor plumbing.

It tells the origin of the Indian Head Penny. The face on the penny is Sarah Longacre (an ancestor of the Longenecker family) and not of an Indian. Her father was the chief engraver in the U.S. Mint at Philadelphia. One morning an Indian chief toured the mint. Twelve-year-old Sarah was intriqued with his feathers and paint so the Indian placed his headdress on her. Her father sketched her wearing the headdress. In 1835 a competition was opened for sketches and engravings for the new copper cent that was to be issued. Her father entered the sketch of his daughter with the Indian headdress and the sketch was chosen to be imprinted on the penny.

The book title was chosen because hardwork (pitchforks) and music (pitchpipes) were prime themes woven throughout the Longenecker lineage.

Esther said that she had always desired to write and eight years ago took a writing course from Wheaton College in Chicago. She wanted to leave a legacy for future Longenecker generations so that they could know, love, and understand and most of all carry on the faith of their ancestors.

She did not want future generations to know only a name, but she wanted the person to be able to relate to the pressures and joys of each era.

She asked her 44 cousins, who range from 40 to 70 years, to write about their childhoods and present lives.

Some wrote pages of information, others jotted down a few memories, and others preferred to tape record memories for Esther to transcribe. Some preferred that Esther intererview them as they reminisced about their past and the stories they had been told.

The book is filled with black and white pictures of families and homesteads. Several Longeneckers had traveled to Switzerland to gather history and pictures of the family homestead there.

It took Esther three years working full time to finish the book. Her daughters, Kathy of East Petersburg and Geni of Santa Rosa, California, helped with layout, typing of the manuscript, and photographing recent pictures.

The family said that they discovered patterns of values, emotions, and personality traits passed down through the generations.

Daughter Geni said, "It was a time of understanding why I am the way I am."

Now that Esther has recorded a part of history her perspective on history has changed. She said, "When it becomes a part of me, it is interesting, not boring."

Her words of advice for those considering writing a family history are to:

- Hold a meeting with those who will be contributing to the book.
- Encourage each member to write down their story no matter how roughly written.
- Gather information.
- Get ideas from others who have compiled family histories. She suggests examining her book to get ideas.
- Include an index.

She stresses, "When a person gets an idea to do something, he or she should get going and not stop."

She cautions, "It isn't all an estatic experience, but when it is finished, you look back and wonder how it got done."

Esther is 74-years-old and lived on a Marietta farm for 52 years. Former poultry farmers, she and her husband had also farmed tomatoes, beans, lima beans, and potatoes. They now grow soybeans and wheat on the land. Her husband, Paul Hiestand, operates Hiestand Supply.

Esther Mae Longenecker Hiestand holds a copy of the book she has compiled charting the Longenecker family history.

The book sells for $75 in local bookstores and can be ordered through Esther Mae Hiestand, R.D. #1, Box 96C, Marietta, PA 17547 or call (717) 426-3033.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Cooking vegetables for one or two is easy and convenient in your microwave oven. Cooking time is short, preparation is easy, and taste is terrific.

Shop where you can choose fresh vegetables from bulk displays. Pick out one, just a few, or the amount you know you'll use up in a few days. Buy frozen vegetables in bags so you can easily remove and cook only what you need.

Check your microwave cookbook for cooking times. Often books give cooking times for one or two servings. Follow directions, cooking slightly less. Stir, and if necessary, add more time to cook your vegetables to the perfect doneness you like.

If you have to adapt a larger recipe, divide amount of vegetables, water and cooking time proportionally. For example, to make two servings from a four-serving microwave recipe, start by dividing ingredients and time in half; from a six-serving recipe, divide by three; from an eight-serving recipe, divide by four; etc. Again, cook slightly less and add time as needed.

Use a dish about half the size of one used in the original four- or six-serving recipe. For cut-up or stirrable vegetables, make the cooking dish an individual 1½ - to two-cup casserole, a small mixing bowl or a large soup mug. These are better than a shallow dish. In a pie plate or flat cooking dish, vegetables spread out and are likely to overcook on the corners. In general, use a tight cover -- such as plastic wrap or a tight lid -- for vegetables to hold in steam and promote fast, even cooking. (There are some exceptions. One recipe below is an example.)

To glamorize vegetables, add a pinch or two of dried herb leaves or your favorite no-salt seasoning during cooking. Avoid salting vegetables during cooking since salt dries out and toughens the vegetable's surface. Add a sprinkle of cheese or seasoned bread crumbs after cooking to add a special touch.

Finally, don't forget standing time -- so vegetables can finish tenderizing without overcooking and toughening. Three to five minutes of standing, still covered with the cooking cover, is the final step in making a terrific-tasting microwaved vegetable.

The recipes below are quick and easy. Fresh Tomato Sauce makes a light, fresh-tasting sauce to serve over pasta or rice. It also enhances cooked vegetables, grilled chicken or sliced deli meats. Here, no cover is used during microwaving because the tomato won't dry out and some liquid should evaporate so sauce thickens.

Herbed Carrots With Curry Sauce calls for shredded carrots for the fastest cooking and the tenderest end results. Stir once during cooking and let stand while you make the sauce.

Easy Pizza-Stuffed Zucchini is a wonderful main dish to serve two. The filling is cooked before adding to zucchini "boats", and the stuffed zucchini cooked until tender. Add the cheese after cooking and let stand tightly covered both to melt cheese and finish cooking zucchini.

Fresh Tomato Sauce for One or Two

1 large fully-ripe tomato
2 garlic cloves
1 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning

Coarsely chop tomato. (There should be 1½ cups.) Mince garlic. Place tomatoes, garlic and Italian seasoning in a small microwavable bowl or 2-cup measure. Microwave (High) uncovered 3 to 4 minutes or until thick. Season to taste. Serve over pasta, rice, cooked vegetables, meat or poultry and sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. Makes 1 or 2 servings.

Each serving -- ½ of recipe: 13 calories, 1g protein, 0 fat, 6g carbohydrate, 0 sodium, 0 cholesterol.

Herbed Carrots With Curry Sauce

2 small carrots, shredded (1-1¼ cups shreds)
1 tablespoon water
¼ teaspoon dried thyme or rosemary leaves
Curry Sauce (below)

Stir together carrots, water and thyme in a microwavable 2- to 3-cup casserole. Cover tightly with plastic wrap or lid. Microwave (High) 1½ to 2½ minutes, stirring after 1 minute, until carrots are just about done. Let stand, covered, about 5 minutes. While carrots stand, make Curry Sauce (below). Stir in curry sauce and serve. Makes 2 servings.

Hint: If you prefer sliced carrots, slice them as thinly as possible. Double the amount of water, cover tightly, and microwave (High) 1½ to 3 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking.

Each serving: 64 calories, 3g protein, 1g fat, 12g carbohydrate, 66mg sodium, 4mg cholesterol.

Curry Sauce

½ cup low-fat milk
½ tablespoon cornstarch
¼ -¼ teaspoon curry powder
½ teaspoon lemon juice

In a microwavable 4-cup measure, stir together milk, cornstarch and curry powder. Microwave (High) 1½ to 2½ minutes, stirring after each 45 seconds. Stir in lemon juice and add sauce to cooked carrots. Makes about ½ cup sauce.

Hint: This is also good with cooked broccoli, green beans or cauliflower. Double recipe by using a 1-quart measure and double amounts of ingredients. Microwave 3 to 4 minutes, stirring after each minute.

Each 2-tablespoon serving: 17 calories, 1g protein, 0 fat, 3g carbohydrate, 17mg sodium, 2mg cholesterol.

Easy Pizza-Stuffed Zucchini

1 medium zucchini (about 2-inch diameter, 1 pound)
½ pound bulk Italian sausage (or 2 links, with casings removed)
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 medium tomato, seeded, chopped and drained
1 slice bread, made into crumbs
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon Italian seasoning
2 tablespoons shredded part-skim Mozzarella cheese

Cut zucchini in half lengthwise; scoop out pulp, leaving ¼ -inch-thick shell. Place shells in a microwavable 6½ x10½ -inch baking dish; set aside. Chop zucchini pulp tomake ½ cup; set aside. Discard remaining pulp. Place sausage and onion in microwavable 4-cup measure or casserole. Microwave (High) 2 to 3 minutes, stirring once to break up meat, or until meat is no longer pink. Drain; stir in zucchini pulp, tomato, bread crumbs and seasonings. Lightly stuff mixture into shells. Cover with paper. Microwave (High) 6 to 8 minutes or until zucchini is almost tender when tested with a fork. Sprinkle with cheese; cover with plastic wrap and let stand 5 minutes. Makes 2 main-dish servings.

Each serving: 317 calories, 17g fat, 11g carbohydrate, 96mg sodium, 104mg cholesterol.

Two FFA Students Profiled In Book About Successful Deaf Youth In America

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — Two former FFA students, Rodney Bomgardner from Lebanon County and Alice McNulty from Bucks County, are featured with 40 students in a book about successful deaf youth in America.

Lancaster Farming readers will recall the name Rodney Bomgardner as a familiar name in FFA — a Star Greenhand and a Keystone Farmer who attended the Kansas City convention as a meat judge, and a 4-H winner in fair and farmshow livestock competitions.

Rodney, the son of Hampshire and Yorkshire breeders Charles and Marlene Bomgardner of Annville, was 3 years old when diagnosed with a severe hearing impairment — an 80 decibel loss. Immediately, he was fitted with the highest power hearing aid available. He began taking signing and speech classes. In third grade he became the first hearing-impaired student in the Lebanon County School District to be "mainstreamed" into the regular classroom.

To help him communicate with his teachers, he wore an FM auditory training unit in which his teachers wore a microphone device that picked up his voice and he picked up the teacher's voice.

The unit was not without problems. Rodney recalls that on the first day of school in senior high, he was walking down the hall when a teacher who thought Rodney was listening to an AM radio yelled, "You get that thing off right this minute."

Almost immediately, the teacher realized why Rodney was wearing the device so the teacher yelled, "And you put that thing back on right this minute."

The device also brought plenty of laughs. If the teacher did not remove the microphone when walking outside the classroom, which happened quite often, Rodney could hear the teacher scolding a student in the hallway, conversing with other teachers, and even rest room conversations.

Few classmates treated Rodney as a handicapped person when he attended Annville-Cleona High School where he excelled in football, wrestling, and FFA in which he served as sentinel and vice president.

As a senior, he was chosen to play in the all-county defense and as part of the senior bowl football team where he played offense. The first time he participated in a wrestling tournament, he placed first in the midget weight class. Later, he earned a bronze medal in the 165-pound weight class in competition and took fourth place in the strongman competition as a sophomore competing with seniors.

Although his hearing aid sometimes stopped functioning because of sweating, it never interfered with his winning.

He has lost count of the trophies he has won over the years, but they include numerous awards for oil painting, FFA and 4-H showing, and sports.

Inducted into the National Honor Roll Society, Rodney got much satisfaction out of proving he could get A's and B's and also do well in sports.

At senior awards night, Rodney was surprised to be awarded seven trophies for his success in agriculture, athletics, art, and behavior. He received the coveted trophy for excelling academically, athletically, socially, and in citizenship.

Rodney collects International Harvester memorabilia. He also has more trophies than he has counted for winning in sports, livestock competition, and for excelling academically, athletically, socially and in citizenship.

Two scholarships enabled him to attend Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C., last fall. When he entered, he expected schooling to be easier than ever before. For the first time in his life, he would be in the majority as a hearing-impaired student and have specially-trained teachers for the hearing impaired.

Surprisingly, Rodney found that he did not fit in as well with the hearing impaired as he did with hearing students. Deaf students at the university thought Rodney did not belong there since he could converse with the hearing instead of relying on sign language.

According to Rodney, there are two different methods of signing — one spells the words out, the other has one sign for a phrase of three or four words. Because he had been mainstreamed into a regular classroom during his elementary and high school years, Rodney never learned to sign expertly — a drawback at a deaf university.

While there, he found success in sports by playing football and javelin throwing.

Most of the circles that Rodney grew up in did not consider him handicapped. But outside those groups, he finds it a bit tougher to adapt. Although a stranger can understand Rodney's speech, his hearing impairment prevents him from hearing certain sounds and therefore some of his words are not pronounced distinctly. In school, Rodney felt accepted by his peers, but he now faces a new pressure — that of feeling caught in between the hearing and the non-hearing — a feeling that he doesn't really belong to either group.

Rodney is not returning to college this year. He is working for a landscaper, but his desire is to be a dairy farmer. Although he comes from a hog farming background, he prefers dairy farming ever since he had worked part time on his uncle's dairy. Since he has only two registered Holsteins, owning a dairy farm seems like an impossibility to him.

These days he thinks a lot about some advice his dad gave him several years ago when he first began wrestling: "Make the other guy struggle. Make him earn that pin. Don't give in."

Rodney is determined to apply that to life. He said, "We can't give up without a struggle. We must give our best. Sometimes our best turns out to be better than we thought."

He's counting on that. He said, "My next step is to find a job on a dairy farm."

Alice Ann McNulty enjoyed FFA where she could participate in many projects. She is featured in a book about successful deaf youth in America.

When a ladder blew down, stranding students on a roof, they screamed for help when Alice McNulty walked by. When she ignored their cries, they complained, "Are you deaf?"

Later, the students were shocked to learn that their schoolmate was indeed deaf. Alice Ann has learned to communicate so expertly by lip reading and speaks so clearly that many of her classmates were unaware that she is diagnosed as moderately deaf.

Being mainstreamed into hearing classrooms was not without problems. One time she was working so intently in the classroom that she did not hear the fire drill bell nor did she notice all her classmates and the teacher leave the room.

In ninth grade Alice began taking agricultural courses. She said that her ag teacher was the most thoughtful teacher she ever had.

The gregarious, fun-loving teen—ager has earned the gold award, the highest award in Girl Scouting for a video that was aired on TV and in classrooms. In 1989, she was named second runner-up in the Miss Deaf Southeastern Pennsylvania contest for talent and beauty. She has been FFA treasurer for three years at Pennridge High School in Sellersville and earned numerous top awards for her baked goods, home-grown vegetables, and floral designs.

But success isn't something that Alice Ann achieved without perseverance. When she was younger, she was extremely shy. At 11 years old, she felt resentful and frustrated that she is deaf and also blind in one eye.

Amazingly, it was her pet cat, Midnight, that changed her attitude. "Midnight was blind, but he wasn't afraid of anything. He inspired me to face the world and ignore my problems," Alice said.

And today, Alice has no qualms about being deaf. She accepts herself and doesn't view her hearing disability as a detriment. She attended many FFA leadership conferences, showed sheep, and excels in woodworking and other crafts.

"Show her anything, and she

Rodney won first prize for a painting called "Pine Creek," his favorite fishing spot near Pennsylvania's Grand Canyon. His painting of Hereford cattle in a pasture won Best of Show in competition.

can do it," her mother said. "Alice is extremely observant."

She also is extremely expressive when she sings and signs with the church choir. She attends numerous Bible study groups.

She made a video "Can You Hear Me?" to challenge deaf persons and explain to hearing what deaf persons can do. The video improves communication between deaf and hearing. After presenting the video to 250 people, a TV cable station interviewed her and broadcast her video.

Because Alice greatly enjoyed the filming, directing, and acting in producing the video, she plans to minor in communications, possibly in TV production, at Gallaudet University where she is a freshman. Her main goal is to teach deaf students. To earn a degree in teaching, she will be required to teach hearing students for four years.

Alice's mother deliberately did not learn much sign language so that her daughter was forced to use every part of speech that she had.

She said, "I wanted my daughter to be able to function without relying on her parents. Sometimes it's really scary to let her do things on her own, because Alice is very independent and her greatest problem is to ask for help even if she needs it."

One of the most positive influences in Alice's life is her dad, a Vietnam veteran who believes all people can do more than humanly possible if they try. He told her, "There is no limit to what you can do. A handicap is only a handicap if you let it be."

Alice has traveled to 28 states, Mexico, Nova Scotia, and to Ireland three times. For four years, she attended Bill Rice Ranch for the deaf in Tennessee. She is amazed at the difference in cultures. At the camp, deaf people are everywhere and even shop owners signed, but in Ireland she met a person who was deaf and dumb because people never bothered to teach him sign language or talk to him. Alice insisted on bringing him to America to attend the deaf camp. Within two weeks, he learned enough American sign language to communicate everything that he wanted to say.

Rodney is determined to apply that to life. He said, "We can't give up without a struggle. We must give our best. Sometimes our best turns out to be better than we thought."

"Alice is always helping people," her mother said. "She has earned the nickname 'Dear Abby.'"

Of all her activities, people are the most important to her.

"I want to be a friend and touch all people with caring and love," Alice said.

Alice had lived with her parents Mr. and Mrs. P.J. McNulty, three brothers, and one sister on a Sellersville farmette until August when she entered Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C. In the past, the family has raised chickens, turkeys, and ducks on their mostly swampy land. Now they raise horses, bees, and Christmas trees — and a surplus of mosquitoes and toads.

The book "Hometown Heroes" can be purchased for $11.95 from Gallaudet University Press, 800 Florida Avenue NE, Washington, D.C. 20002-3695 or call 1-800-451-1073.

STIR-FRY SCRAMBLE

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 package (10 ounces) frozen asparagus or chopped broccoli
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 can (4 ounce) sliced mushrooms, undrained
6 eggs
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

In 10-inch omelet pan or skillet over medium heat, cook asparagus and mushrooms in hot oil, stirring occasionally, until asparagus is tender, about 4 to 5 minutes.

Beat together eggs, lemon juice and salt until blended. Pour over vegetables. As mixture begins to set, gently draw an inverted pancake turner completely across bottom and sides of pan, forming large soft curds. Continue until eggs are thickened but still moist. Do not stir constantly.

It is better to remove scrambled eggs from pan when they are slightly underdone. Heat retained in eggs completes the cooking.

Meanwhile, stir together sour cream, mushrooms and seasonings until well combined. Remove shells from oven. Spoon 2 tablespoons of the sour cream mixture over each egg. Continue baking until hot, about 3 minutes. Bake tops alongside filled shells and serve as lids or accompaniments, if desired.

Add potatoes and onion. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally, until potatoes begin to brown, about 5 to 7 minutes. Reduce heat to medium. Beat together eggs, milk, salt, and dill weed until blended. Pour over potato mixture. Add reserved sausage. Scramble.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

The first hint that the calendar couldn't be trusted came a couple of weeks ago.

That was on the day I went searching for a particular day and date in October. Closer inspection revealed that the calendar had no October.

No October? Who would print a calendar minus October?

It was a mystery that puzzled me until recently, when I removed the spiral-ringed calendar from its home on the side of the filing cabinet to flip from August to September. Close inspection revealed a narrow fringe of paper remaining inside the metal spirals on which the pages flip. Obviously one had been removed. And since all the months were there but October, that one was no doubt the vacancy on the twelve-month record.

A flash suddenly illuminated the brain, like the cartoon-style light-bulb effect. Ah ha! Now I remembered. The colorful picture opposite the grid page of November's dates sported a bird photo I'd needed months before. October's absence was my own doing.

The eleven-month calendar was promptly replaced with a complete version. But the suspicion that the calendar can't be trusted hangs on.

For instance, the year 1989 still turns up occasionally on checks that have come back with the bank statement. No one has turned them down yet, though, so maybe others find the calendar suspect, too.

But what really causes this doubt is a persistent feeling that it can't possibly be September yet. Not a single notebook, stack of notebook paper, or pair of new sneakers has been requested. In fact, it was with mixed emotions that I could browse the back-to-school shopping sales flyers absent the actual trauma of dealing with school shopping needs.

For the first time in 16 years, we are no longer the parents of school-age children. No more need to convince a small boy (not so small in recent years) that Dad can manage the farm while his junior advisor is forced back to life as a classroom captive.

Even the animals can't seem to keep up with the calendar's rapidly turning pages.

Our usual March-April abundance of baby kittens never materialized this spring, an omission Mother Nature has since seen fit to correct. September arrived with letters of fat, furry, roly-poly kittens coming out of the woodwork.

They seem to be heavily favored on the side of fuzzy-gray, some with a few white facial markings, plus a couple dressed in sleek Halloween-black fur. Goober, long-time dairy-barn mascot, seems oblivious to the tumbling, pouncing kittens as he stretches out to snooze in the sunshine. A large tomcat, fuzzy-gray and domineering, Goober's role in the kitten boom is pretty obvious to the rest of us, though.

Even the goofy guinea hens have their seasons backwards.

Several of them parked for weeks on nests overflowing with eggs. Despite such devotion, they produced not a single hatch. we concluded that all five of the screechy-voiced birds were hens and their nesting was a fruitless pursuit.

That was before we spied the five diminutive, speckled-brown chicks trailing behind one hen last week. Unseasonable or not, the guineas finally convinced us that somewhere among them lurks a feathered fellow.

While the birds and the bees are even mixed up, one sign of September is so obvious that even those of us hard pressed to deal with time's fast flight can't ignore it.

Heifers are tied for extra care in the wagon shed. A cow occasionally passes through the yard on a halter-training session. And clippers, halters and related show equipment have begun to appear in the barn office.

The Fair show season is upon us. And before I knew anything about birds and/or bees, I knew when the fair came.

I might question the calendar, but I'm not about to question the Fair.

My word, it is September. Already.

Why Do Lightning Bugs Flash Their Lights

Lightning bugs, also called fireflies, flash their lights to attract a mate. The fireflies you see flying on summer evenings are all males looking for partners.

The female does not have any wings. She has a grublike appearance and is often called a glowworm. Her light is bluer and dimmer than her male counterpart's. (You may have luck seeing a female firefly by looking for the females on moonless nights after your eyes have adjusted to the dark.)

The female waits in the glass flashing her light to attract interested males. Fireflies can tell from the sequence of flashes whether they are of the same species. When visual contact is made and proper identification determined, the male lands and meets the female.

One predatory species of firefly takes advantage of this courtship. It waits in the grass mimicking the female's sequence of flashes. When the male lands to mate, he is eaten instead.

Did you know that the light given off by fireflies is cold light? It does not produce heat. The light comes from the oxidation of an enzyme. This reaction is nearly 100-percent efficient in producing light.

ALLOW CHILDREN TO BE MOTHER'S LITTLE HELPERS

Mothers who work outside the home (57% of mothers with preschoolers are employed) find their time stretched to the limit by their responsibilities at work and at home. The full-time Homemaker also does many things that take time away from her children.

How can mothers do all they need to do and still find time for teaching their children?

A mother's best helper is her own children. Sometimes mother's little helper gets in the way, makes a mess or takes extra time. It is often easier just to do a job yourself, especially for the mother working outside the home. She may spend her limited time in play with the child and do housework after the child is in bed.

If you are guilty of doing your housework after your child is in bed, ask yourself if you are just trying to get the job done rather than prepare your child for successful life roles.

Start your children doing little jobs, like holding the baby correctly. Slowly work them up to more difficult jobs. You will be surprised at how this will help bring your children closer to you and how it will build their sense of self-worth.

You may be thinking, that sounds good, but isn't it hard to get children to work around the house or farm?

Kids have a natural desire to help. However, sometimes in our desire for our children to learn to do things well, we are overly critical of the efforts they make at first. Try to point to the good work children do and keep criticism to a minimum. Reward their efforts even if the results were not up to your adult standards at first. Too much criticism may kill the natural desire your children have to learn and help. Praise and appreciation for their efforts will encourage their interest in working.

The attitude you have toward work will significantly influence the attitude your children develop. In recent years we've heard a lot about the "workaholic." But we probably have many more loafers than "workaholics" in our society.

Parents should be more concerned about teaching children how to work and take pride in their accomplishments than about how to relax. Obviously, balance is important.

In many ways, school is a child's first job. Parents who foster attendance, responsibility for assignments and the expectation to do one's best are developing attitudes in their children that will prepare them to be productive, successful, happy workers.

In addition to school-age work experiences appropriate for a child's age, hobbies can help a child learn to enjoy work and constructive activity

Children usu develop interest in hobbies during middle-childhood: ages 6-11. These interests may blossom into careers. Also, children with hobbies are less likely to be chronically bored and uninvolved.

Hobbies developed as youngsters may stick with us as adults. They can be a stimulating alternative outlet for adults who might otherwise become narrowly focussed in their work.

Of course, it is important that children be encouraged in their own interests, not those of the parents. Children will either rebel or become apathetic about hobbies that are forced on them.

Every parent has heard a frustrated young child say, "I want to do it myself!" The child is really saying, "I want to feel capable and important." If we repeatedly tell the child "You cannot" or "You did it wrong" eventually the child will not do anything.

Flower Show: Brilliant In Color, Design

Remembered Beauty

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

For the 41st year, Lebanon County's Flower Clubs combined brilliant color and talent that demonstrated unlimited possibilities with flowers.

Competition was tough with 326 entries by 68 exhibitors at the Flower Show held at Lebanon Valley Mall on August 29-30.

For accumulating the most blue ribbons, Mary Heffelfinger won the grand sweepstakes. She placed first in design, wreath, abstract, horticulture, and dried categories.

By combining rainspouting, pipe, Century lilies and asters, Keiko Smith of Annville clinched the creativity award. Smith was trained in Japan and is well-known for her Japanese designs.

The top award in the tricolor category went to Theresa Kreich-

Creativity

baum, who arranged zinnias and yucca leaves in front of a mirror for a design called "Double Pleasure."

These ladies used their creativity and talent in flower arrangements that won top awards out of 326 entries in Lebanon County Flower Club's 41st annual show. From left, front row: Amy Bollinger, Mary Helfinger, and Irene Fox. From left, back row: Rita Zellers, Keiko Smith, and Elva Finebiner.

Rita Zellers of Lebanon garnered the petite award for a tiny arrangement that included miniature daises, zinnias, and baby breath.

Irene Fox won the award of distinction for her dried flower basket arrangement of "Remembered Beauty" that predominately used peonies and asters.

Competition also was held in categories such as houseplants, annuals, horticulture, tubers, bulbs, perennials, roses, herbs, succulents, hanging baskets, and catus divisions.

Most categories are open to all amateur flower growers and were judged by 15 qualified persons.

Chairpersons for the event were Mrs. Winfield Finkbiner and Mrs. William Smith. If you are interested in knowing more about Lebanon County Flower Club, call Margaret Gerberich at (717) 865-3538.

TAKING TIME

by Rebecca Wolf
Extension Home Economist

When the "Good-Byes" Have Been Said

You've said your "good-byes" and ushered the last of your children off to college or a first job. Now you return to that empty house—the house that until yesterday was filled with conversation and activity.

Suddenly you question your life. You may wonder if you have any significance now? What is left to do?

Let me reassure you, your role as mother or father will continue for many years even if the children are not actually living in your home (and that may not remain the case).

In fact, some parents actually may be envying your new-found freedom! In more and more families, adult children move back home with a parent after completing school, during period of financial crisis, or become of changes in relationships.

These parents and I say, "CARPE DIEM!" Seize the day.

Seize the opportunity to make a few positive changes in your life! Researchers suggest that mid-life years are second only to the teenager years in regard to the amount of change experienced! No wonder families feel temporarily disorganized and incapacitated.

This "empty-nest" time is a chance for you to re-evaluate many aspects of your life—your marriage, job, friendships, community involvement, interests, and personal growth.

During my seminars on balancing work and family, I talk to women who have devoted much of their lives to their families. When those families are gone, many of these women don't know what to do with their time. For those of you in limbo, let me encourage you with these ideas.

Take time to fine-tune your marriage. When the children leave, you and your spouse may be surprised by the tensions that develop. Quite possibly, you've forgotten how to be alone together! Resolve issues that may have been on the back burner for years is now a priority in your relationship.

Fortunately for most couples, after they work through the adjustments, these years bring increased marital satisfaction. The months ahead give you a chance to rediscover the person you fell in love with twenty or thirty years ago.

Research reports indicate couples who spend more time talking and listening to each other are more likely to experience that increased satisfaction. You and your husband or wife need to purposely plan some "couple time."

Why not seize the opportunity to take that autumn bus trip through New England or splurge on dinner at that new restaurant in town? Take a risk! Sign up for a hot air balloon ride or a makeover.

By showing special interest in your spouse's abilities and activities and by planning some time together, you will be able to fine-tune your relationship.

Seizel the moment. Begin that long-neglected exercise program. Exercising helps a person work off anxiety and irritability that she may be feeling. Make a plan to walk with a neighbor. Going a "country mile" with a friend can do wonders for your mood—and your health.

An empty house may be the added incentive you need to leave your house in the evening to take a class at the community college or volunteer of a local service project. Pursue an interest that was always postponed because kids needed a ride to a game or dirty laundry had wormed its way out of the confines of the linen closet.

You're right! The house does seem quiet. But it doesn't need to stay that way unless you want it to! Take time. Enjoy this period of increased freedom from restrictions of time, mobility, financial pressure and work related to raising children.

Jack And The Beanstalk?

Don't be fooled. This isn't Jack and the Beanstalk. It's J.R. Grove of Red Lion climbing a ladder to pick tomatoes. Last week, the tomato plant measured 20 feet in height and it's still growing! Although retired, J.R. said he is a farmer at heart — he certainly has a green thumb."

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This has been an especially busy summer. The day after we got home from our European trip, our son and family arrived. They live in Atlanta and their four-year-old boy and seven-month-old girl kept us going. My husband took the boy boating on a nearby lake. Matthew enjoyed running the electric motor. His sister, Rebecca, is such a happy baby and was a real joy.

Two days later we had a family reunion at my sister's house. Our children got to see many of their cousins. The next generation range from a freshman in college to a two-week-old baby. All of our grandchildren are under 11 years of age, and we seldom get to see them.

My garden was very weedy when we came home from our vacation, and there were lots of very big cucumbers and many zucchini waiting for me. Allen planted extra rows of sweet corn. Now that he has retired, I've been freezing corn and beans until our two freezers are full. I do not feel as though I am "retired."

This year I am raising asparagus beans on a permanent wire fence and they are producing a big crop. So far, I've given most of these 15-inch long beans away as I do prefer Kentucky Wonder beans as their pods are thick and fairly straight.

One day while working in the garden, I heard children squealing near our meadow. When I walked to the river's edge, I found am Amish father sitting in a row boat watching his five children playing in the water. At least they kept the permanent flock of wild geese from making their usual noise. Our domestic geese have only raised one new gosling this year. But, our neighbors have many white ducks on the river again.

Create New Word, Win $50,000

If you can think of a positive word to describe people with disabilities, you could win $50,000 in a contest being sponsored by the National Cristina Foundation (NCF).

Current words to describe people with disabilities, such as disabled, handicapped, crippled, etc. have negative connotations. The 43 million Americans who have physical or mental impairments need a word that focuses on their abilities, not their disabilities.

Entries should consist of either a single new word or a new combination of existing words with a clear single meaning — a positive description of people with disabilities. The only rule for creating the new word is imagination!

Entries must be postmarked no later than November 30, 1990 and sent to: NCF Contest, 2301 Argonne Drive, Baltimore, MD 21218. More than one entry per person is allowed, however, please include a separate envelope or postcard for each.

The National Cristina Foundation distributes commercially obsolete computers and software, at no cost, to organizations nationwide which train people with disabilities to lead productive lives.

To find out more about entering the contest and receive free literature, call 1/900-988-WORD. (There is a $3.00, tax deductible charge for the call, with proceeds going to NCF to help carry on their work.)

Idaho Agriculture — Farming Without Rain

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

MOSCOW, Idaho — For as far as the eye can see, golden acres of ripe wheat wave in a dry, baking-hot breeze. Clouds of dust hover over the hills, telltale sign that harvesting is underway.

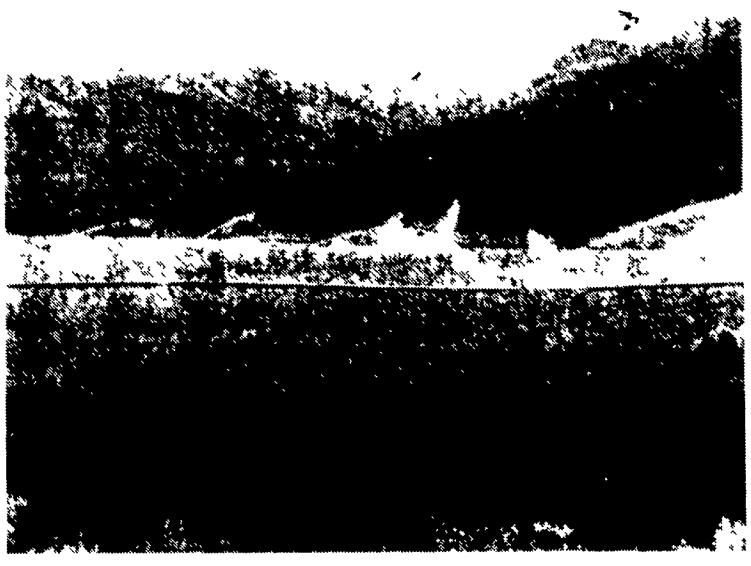
This is the Palouse (pronounce pa-loose'), a unique section of intense dryland grain agriculture production spanning the border of Idaho's panhandle and southeastern Washington.

A lava plain, the Palouse is believed to have been formed eons ago by Pacific winds blowing toward the northern Rocky Mountains carrying soil from the Columbia River basin. The silty-loam soil piled into sand-dune-like giant mounds, creating an area of random, steep-sloped hills and undulating valleys.

These topsoils are powdery, mostly stoneless, very rich, and reportedly as much as one-hundred-feet deep at some locations. Covering an area of approximately three thousand square miles, the Palouse is believed to be the richest production area in the world of soft white winter wheat. Soft white wheat is lower in protein and higher in starches, making it valuable for use in certain types of noodles, staple food, for many oriental peoples.

With adequate rainfall, the Palouse could no doubt grow a wide variety of crops. But rain is the limiting factor, generally from 14 to 20 inches annually, most of that between October and April. Irrigation, used extensively in some sections of Idaho, is not feasible in the Palouse, due to the hilly terrain and lack of water.

Wheat, long the staple crop of the area, is cropped in a three-year rotation with barley and dry peas or lentils, a bean relative. After grain harvest, fields are left fallow to gather and hold the minimal summer moisture. Weeds are controlled with the use of a weeder bar implement, which disturbs only the top inch or two of soil.



Though lack of rainfall leaves much of Idaho's rugged land covered with sagebrush, irrigation grows lush, green alfalfa along nearly any small stream large enough to support pumping.

Harvest of wheat gets into full swing in early August, as combines finish cutting the last of the dry pea and lentil plantings. A bulk of the harvests is trucked to Lewiston, the nation's innermost seaport, located at the confluence of the Snake and Clearwater Rivers. At Lewiston, grains are loaded onto barges, then moved downriver to the Columbia, and on to Portland, Oregon, for export. An estimated 75 percent of Idaho's soft white wheat is exported, primarily to customer countries in the Orient.

Wheat yields up to 130 bushel per acre are not unusual in the Palouse. Truckers hauling from the Moscow area related yield estimates this season running from 80 to 115 bushels. Newspaper reports indicated that record heat in Idaho this summer was cutting spring wheat yields somewhat. However, analysts still projected a record wheat production exceeding 100 million bushels, for combined yields of spring and winter wheat.

Hillside combines are the machine, not just of choice, but of necessity, on this sharply-sloping terrain. Special hillside mechanisms have reportedly been developed for this unique grain production area.

"Some combines level at 48-percent slope - and that isn't even quite enough sometimes," noted a combine mechanic in a Moscow equipment dealer's shop.

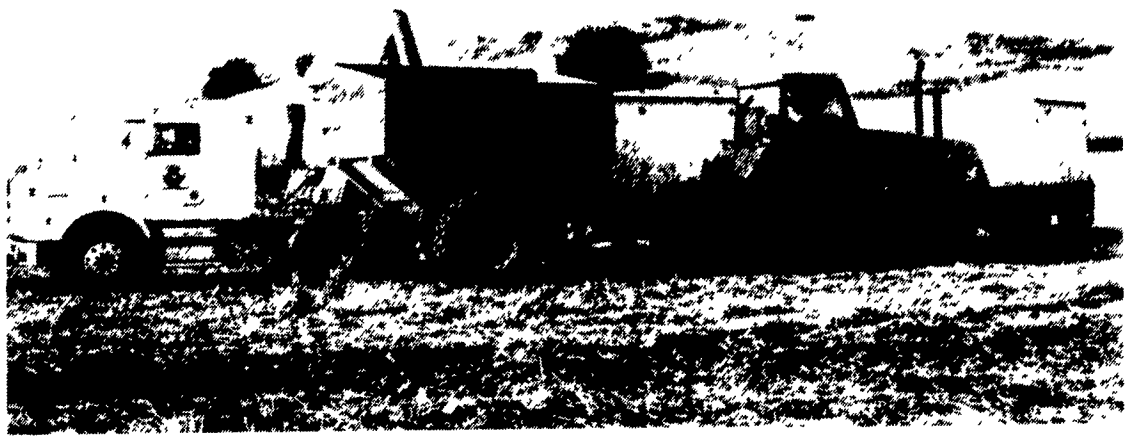
By early August, he added, four combines had already rolled in the immediate area. In fact, Moscow's local newspaper routinely carries advertisements for the uprighting and repair of rolled combines.

Cropping of dry, split peas and lentils is a relatively new addition to the Palouse area, according to Charlie Connoly, controller for the McGregor Fertilizer and Chemical Company. These legumes were added to the cropping program about the early 1960's as Palouse growers looked toward more planting diversity. Since, like all legumes, they make their own nitrogen, peas and lentils generally need no additional fertilizer.

Peas are fairly stable in price, usually selling for about eight cents per pound. Average yields run from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per acre.

Lentils, round, flat legumes about a quarter-inch in diameter, primarily go for export to countries including Egypt, Turkey and India. Price is more volatile than that of dry peas, ranging from as high as 40-cents per pound down to as low as 13-cents per pound. Lentils yield about 1,000-pounds to the acre.

The three-year rotation helps control disease problems which can come with minimum tillagle and straw residues of continuous grain cropping. Burning of straw, once a common way to rid fields of residues and pest problems, is now largely banned.



Gravity wagons shuttle harvested wheat from combine bins to waiting tractor-trailer rigs. Many haulers pull a smaller unit behind their trailer, dubbed a "pup," to move a combined capacity of 37 tons of grain.

Aerial application of both fertilizers and pesticides is common in this area of large-acreage fields. Many farmers are private pilots, utilizing planes as readily as a pickup or harvest equipment.

According to Connoly, the average Palouse farm is about 900 acres, perhaps half of that owned. Grain truckers relate, that the largest producer in the area crops 16,000 acres.

Land prices for the most productive Palouse ground runs in the range of $1,200-$1,400 per acre. Farms are primarily family-operated, with many passing down through the generations.

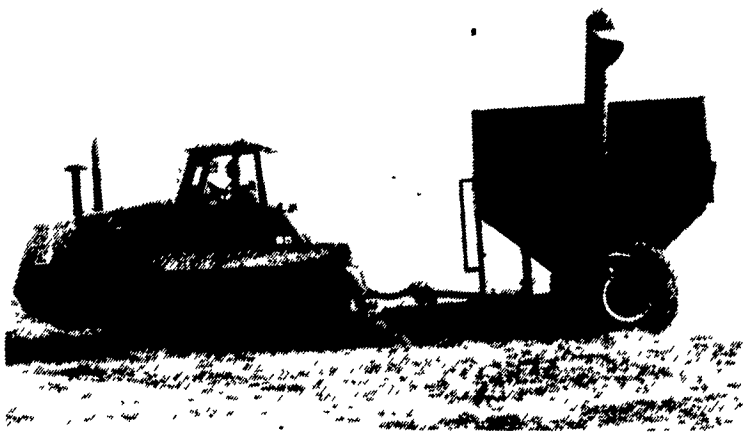
By concentrating solely on grain and dry legume crops, producers in the Palouse can limit their equipment inventory. Most inventories though, are extremely large scale.

"Probably to start a farmer would need a D-6 Caterpillar or a 250-275 horsepower tractor, hillside combine, grain trucks, chisel plow, drill and a rod weeder for summer fallowing," indicates Charlie Connoly.

Crawler-track tractors are favored for the Palouse's steep slopes, as are the four-wheel drive, dual-wheeled giants. Articulated models, once quite popular, still are frequently seen. Disks, chisels and related tillage equipment, as well as combine headers, often run to 24-foot widths. Planting rigs are generally three, four, even five, grain drills operated in tandem. Due to cost of the large equipment needed, leasing of large, new tractors and hillside combines is increasingly popular.

Palouse farmers face some similar problems to those of producers around the country, including loss of some chemicals for certain crops and increased chemical-use record-keeping. Conservation requirements for government program participation is already changing some cropping practices. Some erosion-control contouring and strip-cropping is underway, through strips are much wider than those familiar to mid-Atlantic area producers.

While lack of water limits the Palouse to primarily dryland farming, other parts of Idaho which have adequate water flow do irrigate and produce a variety of crops. Potatoes, corn, sugar beets and alfalfa are grown intensively under irrigation. Both trench irrigation and spray rigs of every shape and size bring lush green crops to what is otherwise barren, desert-like terrain, covered with sagebrush and tumbleweeds. Wherever a small stream flows through hilly, dry, grazing country, an alfalfa field under irrigation will add a patch of green. Giant stacks of bales line the edges of these lush fields, awaiting sale or winter use for the herds of beef cattle which roam Idaho's hills and mountains.



Crawler tractors are favored by many farmers for negotiating the rolling, sheep-sloped hills of the Palouse area of Idaho and Washington.

Alfalfa can be grown and harvested under almost ideal conditions here, watering as needed and simply shutting off the pumps for the hay to be cut and cured under usually bright sun and low humidity.

Alfalfa seed is also grown in some parts of Idaho, along with such diverse crops as onions, mint, grapes, numerous fruits, and hops.

Hops, an essential ingredient in the making of malt beverages, is grown on 18-foot high trellis. From a distance, fields of hops resemble giant, oversize vineyards. The vines of this perennial are hand-trained to grow up twines attached to the trellis structure.

Harvest, which begins in August, reportedly continues on a 24-hour basis into September. The vines of this member of the nettle species are cut and hauled in from the fields at harvest. The hops "fruit," which resemble small, papery pinecones, are removed by machine, kiln-dried, and packaged in 200-pound bales. A pound of dried hops will flavor about 100 gallons of beer.

The world's largest planting of Hallertau hops is reportedly located at Bonners Ferry in Idaho's northern panhandle, not far from the Canadian border. Here, the Anheuser-Busch company produces this German variety of hops on 875 acres. Hops are also grown west of Caldwell toward the Oregon border in a productive desert valley irrigated by waters from the Snake River.

Wildflowers Brighten Highways

and
DAVID L. DUNBAR
Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office

Along Pennsylvania highways, motorists should see a virtual flower show on 150 acres of median strips, roadsides and exit ramps, courtesy of Penn State and the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

Flowers, such as blue flax, Siberian wallflowers, bachelor's buttons and black-eyed Susans, will light up highways throughout the state. Penn State project assistant Gregory T. Lyman received funding from PennDOT to develop a seed mix that would flower throughout the season.

Lyman evaluated 50 different wildflowers and selected 17 species that blossomed well, established ground cover and competed with weeds. Lyman also took flower size into account. He points out that when you're driving 55 miles per hour, small, delicate flowers — no matter how beautiful — won't make much of an impact.

The result is a mix of perennials native to Pennsylvania and the northeastern United States.

In recent years, several state departments of transportation around the country have initiated wildflower programs. Part of the goal in planting wildflowers is to preserve plant species that are being pushed out of natural habitats by development and farming.

Penn DOT maintains 44,000 miles of roads in Pennsylvania, including interstates, main arteries and secondary roads. Since October 1985, the department has cooperated with Penn State to investigate roadside vegetation management. Dr. Thomas L Watschke, professor of turfgrass science, oversees the project.

But when you see wildflowers along the road, look and don't touch. State Highway Law 36-PS makes it illegal to pick them.

Centennial Honors "The Presidential Cattleman"

Sharon B. Schuster

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — He was known as "The Presidential Cattleman." Dwight D. Eisenhower, 34th President of the United States, was an avid breeder of Angus cattle. Based at his Gettysburg farm, "Ike" developed his Aberdeen Angus herd into a first-class show string which captured many honors under the Eisenhower Farms name.

In celebration of Eisenhower's 100th year, the Pennsylvania Angus Association sponsored the Eisenhower Centennial Angus Field Days at the farm, which is now a National Historic Site. On Saturday, August 18, Angus cattle were auctioned off under the white sale tents on the farm, which is usually closed to the public.

The Eisenhower Centennial Angus Sale featured Angus from elite herds from Florida to Colorado, and points in between, all acorss the U.S. According to Bill Powell, representing the association, 38 lots were sold at an average or $4,600 per head. "One cow sold for $20,000 half interest," he added.

The Eisenhower Farm was open for inspection on Sunday, August 19. With its white board fences, barn and outbuildings, the historic site resembles other area farms. The Martin family manages a dairy herd at the farm, and crops the surrounding acreage. Fields of milo and corn line the long driveway, with one noticeable distinction. Rangers reported the damage to corn by the deer population as disastrous.

Deer graze like cattle in the corn fields at the Eisenhower Farm. To demonstrate their destruction to the crops, one small area of corn was fenced around with high wire. The remainder of the surrounding field resembled a hail and wind damaged field - knee high and shredded. Meanwhile, the deer continue to graze. It's a problem that the park service continues to ponder, in search of a suitable solution.

And what of the Angus herd? Eisenhower's winning herd was sold in 1966. But a couple of dozen Angus still graze in the green Gettysburg pastures. According to Bill Powell, a covenant requires anyone who farms the place to run a herd of Angus cattle.

Photographs of the Eisenhower years reveal stocky, rotund, short-legged bovine, desirable at the time. Today, the sleek black animals which run within the confines of the white board fences, tower over their handlers. Eisenhower's herd once numbered 250. While there are none of that bloodline remaining on the farm, Powell reported "running across the Eisenhower name occasionally."

Demonstrations and exhibits roundeld out this unique event. And visitors to the farm enjoyed Certified Angus Beef sandwiches.

The Eisenhower Farm is not usually open to the public, but during the Angus Field Day and Sale, visitors could view the grounds and the former President's Gettysburg home.

Pumpkin Day At Towanda

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — At the 1990 Towanda Fall Foliage Festival a pumpkin growing and pumpkin decorating contest will be held on Saturday, October 6, at the Towanda Airport.

The pumpkin decorating contest will start at 11:00 a.m. The contest is open to all children from pre-kindergarten age through sixth grade.

Classes in the decorating contest include funniest, most original, and scariest. Participants can have only one pumpkin per class. However, each participant can enter any of the three classes or all three.

The Towanda Chamber of Commerce Rev-Up Committee and Penn State Cooperative Extension sponsor the event.

At 10:00 a.m. there will be a 4-H pumpkin growing roundup and pumpkin growing contest. Approximately 80 Bradford County 4-H'ers and Ulster School students will be eligible to enter the contest. These young people planted 5 pumpkin seeds each in May and June and cared for their plants all summer long. There will be 2 classes at the Pumpkin Roundup - largest pumpkin and best quality pumpkin exhibit.

Other events for young people at this year's Fall Foliage Festival include a puppet show at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, October 6, and a pet contest and parade at 1:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 7. Also on Sunday at 3:00 p.m. there will be an apple bobbing contest.

RYE SEED

New Danko Rye Seed offers many advantages including yields approximately as high as wheat (up to 80 bu/acre) plus high resistance to winter injury, lodging & sprouting.

Danko is a fine-seeded rye variety & Davey-Joan's of Williamstown, New York is a major propagator and source of Danko rye seed in the U.S. They report that even with this year's above normal (25") rainfall in their area in May, June & July they have experienced no lodging or sprouting.

Danko can be planted from the 2nd week in September to November 1st. The ideal time is the first week of October. It grows later in the fall & starts earlier in the Spring.

Davey-Joan's has clean seed available in both bulk truck or trailer loads and in bushel bags at $6.00 bagged or $5.50 bulk per bushel - FOB Williamstown, N.Y. Please call for quotes on tractor trailer load quantities.

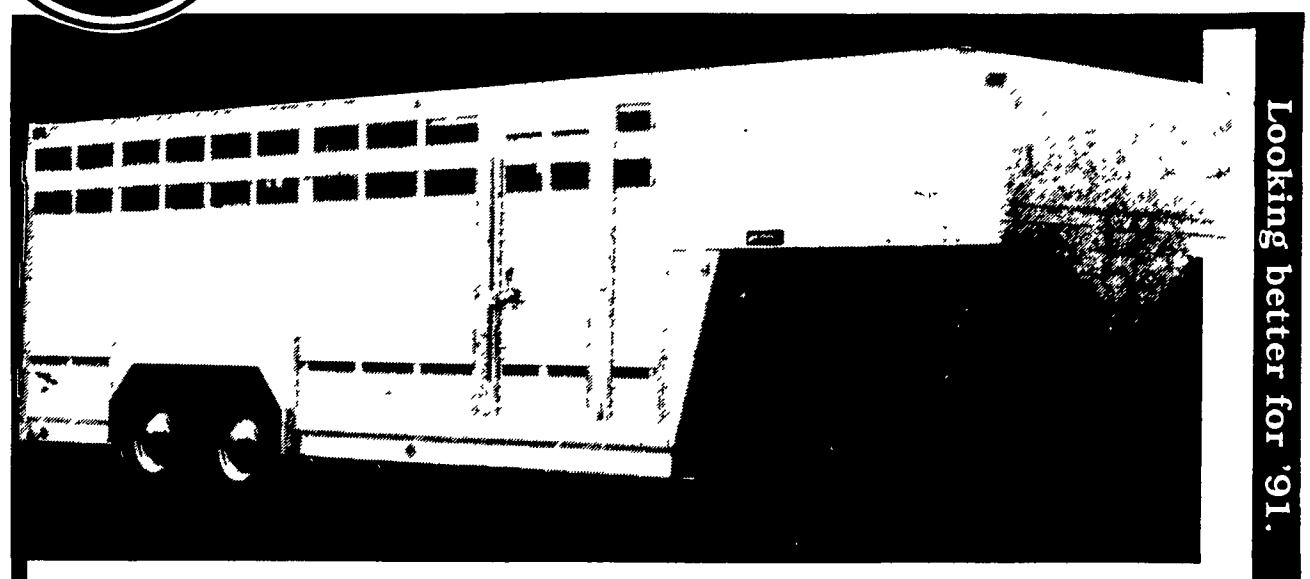
INTRODUCING THE REDESIGNED

WRANGLER



OUR BEST VALUE TRAILER JUST GOT BETTER.

The new Wrangler. More aerodynamic. Better looking. And the strongest Wrangler yet. With top-quality components and rugged construction, this Wrangler is the best trailer value you can find.

- LIGHTWEIGHT- Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers. Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.
- MAINTENANCE- Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.
- DURABILITY- Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer.

223 Entries At 23rd Central District 4-H Dairy Show

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In 4-H district-level dairy competitions here, a number of youth from seven south central Pennsylvania counties on Monday secured positions for their animals in the upcoming state show.

Officials said 223 animals representing six dairy breeds were shown in the Small Arena of the State Farm Show complex, during the 23rd South Central District 4-H Dairy Show.

Those whose animal was presented a blue ribbon are now qualified to show that animal in the state 4-H dairy show. The state show is to be held Sept. 24 in the Large Arena of the complex.

In order to get to the district competitions, youth first showed their animals on a county level.

Judges present blue ribbons based on the quality of the animal and not its placing among other animals presented for competition.

Despite sweltering heat, the six-hour type judging went mostly without incident. Terry Rawn, from Charleston, W.Va., judged Holsteins, Guernseys and Ayrshires. Amos Rudderow, from Massey, Md., judged Jerseys and Brown Swiss and Milking Shorthorn.

In competition among herds representing the counties, Lancaster and Lebanon youth placed high in Brown Swiss and Holsteins. Lebanon County had the only herd offered for the Ayrshire breed and Cumberland County offered the lone herd among Milking Shorthorns.

Cumberland County had the top Jersey herd, over Franklin County animals present. York County's Guernseys bested Lancaster's.

The results of the show are:

Farmers Have Tough Time With Waste Oil

WAYNE MC FARLAND
Special To Lancaster Farming

YORK (York Co.) — Waste oil disposal has become a big problem for farmers in recent years because of strict environmental regulations that have been adopted to protect air and groundwater quality.

The quantity of waste oil generated every year by vehicle fleets, including much farm equipment, has increased steadily, and it is becoming more difficult to get rid of it all the time. It is important for service departments to protect themselves by knowing proper disposal methods for waste oil.

Fortunately, waste oil can be recycled as lubricating oil, or, in some cases, burned as fuel. This helps conserve fuel supplies while providing a safe way to dispose of a toxic waste material.

Typical waste oils include used crankcase oil, transmission fluid, hydraulic oil, and gear lube. Some compounds in waste oil are poisonous and can cause problems if released into the environment.

How can waste oil damage the environment? Waste oil poured on the ground or roads can be carried through the soil by rainwater and ultimately may contaminate wells used for drinking water, livestock watering, or irrigation. Improperly disposed waste oil may end up in a landfill where it can leak out to contaminate groundwater and surface water.

Modern waste oils may contain heavy metals such as lead, zinc, chromium, and cadmium, which are toxic to fish, wildlife, and some crops. Hydrocarbons in waste oil can cause taste and odor problems and foul groundwater and streams. A concentration of only one part per million, waste oil can cause taste and odor problems in drinking water. This means that four quarts of oil from a typical automotive oil change can contaminate a million gallons of drinking water — as much as the average family uses in five years.

What methods should be used to properly dispose of waste oil? The following guidelines are recommended by several state environmental agencies:

• Storage: Used lubricating oils, including crankcase oil, hydraulic fluid, gear lube, and transmission fluid should be kept in a container with a tight fitting lid. Never add solvent, anti-freeze, or paint thinner to the used oil container. Solvents are much more toxic than waste oil and should always be disposed of at a regulated collection center. Contact your state regulatory agency for location of the nearest hazardous materials collection center which will accept solvents or other chemicals.

Some states require waste oil tanks to be labeled, and may limit the quantity of waste oil that can be sorted in one location. In general, once a 55-gallon drum is filled, it should be properly disposed of within ninety (90) days.

It is a good idea to store sorbent materials, such as sorbent pads or "kitty litter," near waste oil tanks or drums to allow quick cleanup or spills.

• Burning: As long as waste oil is not contaminated by solvents or chemicals, meets CPA specifications, most states allow on-site burning of waste oil for heating. However, other states place restrictions on burning, so regulations should be carefully checked before burning waste oil.

With the proper equipment, waste oil can be blended with No. 2 fuel oil and burned in an approved waste oil burner. Since waste oil may contain water, grit, and other impurities that can damage conventional equipment it should never be burned in an conventional oil burner or diesel engine.

Many states prohibit burning waste oil collected from offsite sources, so you can burn only your own waste oil. Also, many states require permits for waste oil burning to insure compliance with air quality regulations.

• Disposal: For those who generate less than five gallons of waste oil at a time, several states allow small quantities of waste oil to be disposed of at a service station or approved collection center. Several states require service stations to accept a limited quantity of waste oil from the public, unless their collection tanks are full. Other states rely on voluntary cooperation from service stations to accept waste oil. Since dealers usually have to pay to dispose of the waste oil, finding a disposal location is getting more difficult.

For most commercial or municipal waste oil generators, arrangements can be made with a licensed waste oil transporter to pick the waste oil at your location. Waste oil transporters are usually listed in the yellow pages and will quote prices for disposal, so it pays to shop around.

It is a good idea to keep accurate records of quantities and types of waste oil disposed of, especially hauler invoices, receipts, or manifests. The waste oil hauler should include his license numbers on all records, so you can prove that the oil was legally disposed of.

If you are unsure of where to dispose of waste oil, call your state environmental agency or the EPA information line (800) (424-9346).

Waste oil collectors usually take the oil to reprocessors who filter the oil and blend additives to allow it to be reused as lubricating oil. Recycling makes sense — it takes 42 gallons of crude oil to produce the same amount of lubricating oil provided by re-refining just one gallon of used motor oil.

If the waste oil meets EPA specifications, some waste oil collectors blend waste oil with heating oil to sell as low-grade heating oil for industry, ships, or greenhouses.

Guide Shows How To Make Profit From Sheep

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers often attempt to raise sheep as a sideline to their other farming endeavors, but many do not have enough breeding ewes to maintain good sheep husbandry without a great expense per head.

Thirty-five to 40 ewes is the minimum number likely to return enough income to make a flock worthwhile. "Sheep Husbandry," a non-credit correspondence course taught through the Pennsylvania State University, teaches farmers how to make sheep a profitable acquisition.

There are several advantages to raising sheep. Sheep make excellent use of forage: six to seven ewes eat the same amount of food as one beef cow. Also cattle and sheep can graze side-by-side because of the similarities in their physical makeup. Sheep can also be used for different types of production, from commercial uses to pure breeding, and they require a minimum amount of labor and inexpensive housing.

There are also disadvantages to the sheep industry. A lack of proper feed and care, poor management, and damage by parasites have all contributed to the discouragement of sheep production. "Sheep Husbandry" teaches an interested sheepherder how to cope with and conquer each one of these problems.

Dr. Thomas L. Merritt, an associate professor of animal industry at Penn State's main campus, has been teaching for more than 30 years. He breaks his course down into several workable sections, each one giving a synopsis of sheep care, equipment, or marketing possibilities.

"Sheep Husbandry" discusses all the ins and outs of mating rams and ewes as well as follow-up care of pregnant ewes and newborn lambs. For instance, during the first 12 to 15 weeks of pregnancy, ewes consume approximately 2½ percent of their weight in air-dry feed daily. If the ewes are on pasture, the sheepherder must make sure that the pasture is providing ample feed. In late fall, too often the pasture becomes rundown or dormant and the ewes have a difficult time just maintaining their body weight. They must have good access to salt and minerals.

If you would like to learn more about raising your own sheep and the possibility of profit, send $16.00 to: "Sheep Husbandry." Course #42, 128 AG-Mitchell Bldg., University Park, PA 16802. Make checks payable to the Pennsylvania State University.

CORTLAND, N.Y. — Seventeen market hogs, three lambs, and three steers were sold at this year's Cortland County 4-H Meat Animal Sale on Friday night, July 27. For the third year in a row, Hatfield Quality Meats purchased the grand champion market hog.

This year's 243-pound grand champion was owned by Brian Bartholomew of Truxton and sold for $1.92½ per pound to Hatfield's. Neal Helms' 239-pound gilt was chosen reserve grand champion and brought $1.05 per pound from Karl Lowes of Vernon Center.

All the hogs shown and sold at this year's junior fair and meat animal sale were of PIC breeding. They were purchased from Cornell University and distributed to the 4-H'ers by lottery.

An 1,185-pound Gelbvieh steer, owned by Neal Helms, was selected grand champion market steer and brought a final bid of $.84 per pound from Ed's Custom Meats of Cortland. Ed's also purchased seven hogs at the sale. Richard and Yvonne Hinkle purchased the 1,270-pound reserve grand champion steer, a Shorthorn owned by Pamela Christofferson, for $.79 per pound.

What Do Runoff, Erosion Cost?

by Robert E. Leiby
and David L. Dunbar
Lehigh County
Cooperative Extension Office

Water running off from agricultural lands causes many problems. Mark Shaw, Penn State agricultural engineer, points out that one set of problems affects the productivity and profitability of farming.

•Water that runs off is not available to the crop. In many cases, that summer thunderstorm that caused heavy runoff from the fields could have helped the crop through a subsequent dry spell if it had been stored in the soil.

•Water running from field carries nutrients from either manure or commercial fertilizer. This results in a loss to the crop, and a wasted investment by the farmer.

•Runoff water removes soil from fields. Gully erosion is obvious and causes concern, but most soil loss is in the form of sheet erosion which is hardly visible or rill erosion which can be seen but is filled in by the next normal tillage operation. Sheet and rill erosion remove enough soil to reduce the productive capacity of a high percenetage of our agricultural land.

Shaw lists another set of problems which affects people downstream, causing environmental damage.

•Water which runs off a field contributes to flooding downstream.

•Plant nutrients which wash off from fields change the chemical balance of the receiving waters and affect plant and animal growth. Recent concern about the Chesapeake Bay is only one example of environmental effects.

•Soil which is deposited in streams results in muddy water and clogged stream channels which affect fish and increase the danger of flooding.

The amount of runoff is affected by rainfall which we can do little to control. It is also affected by soil type and land slopes. While we cannot change these factors, we can control erosion by using easily erodible soils and steeply sloping land for hay and pasture rather than row crops.

The other factors which affect runoff and erosion, over which farmers do have control, are tillage, cropping patterns, and conservation practices. Reduced tillage and no-till can, with good management, reduce both erosion and production costs, resulting in reduced environmental damage and higher economic returns to the farmer. Contouring, strip cropping, and terracing also reduce runoff and erosion.

The public demand for better conservation of our soil and water resources should not be seen as a threat to agriculture, but rather a reminder of the need to farm in ways which will benefit both farmers and society as a whole.

Egg Producers To Vote On Marketing Program

Pennsylvania egg producers will vote on a proposal to establish a marketing program, State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff announced recently. The Department of Agriculture has mailed ballots and copies of the proposed program to approximately 120 egg producers who own 30,000 or more laying hens.

The proposal would establish a checkoff system of contributions from egg producers to fund marketing, research, educational, and promotional activities. Producers would contribute 2.5 cents for each 30 dozen cases sold. Approximately $360,000 would be raised annually to fund the program. The program would be directed by a marketing board composed of egg producers.

For the measure to pass, a simple majority of the producers, in numbers and volume of production, must support the proposal.

Wolff said the referendum is the result of input offered by producers at hearings in June. It will mark the first time that Pennsylvania egg producers have voted on a state marketing program.

Producers who fail to receive a ballot and a copy of the proposal may call the department's toll-free number, 1-800-AG-PENNA. The material is also available from Room 303, Bureau of Market Development, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 N. Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17710-9408.

As Queen And Showman, Lebo Does Well

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Larry Weaver, judge of the Franklin County 4-H Beef steer show, had high praise for the 4-H'ers showing their steers.

"The kids did a super job of fitting," Weaver said after the August 21 show, held at the Chambersburg Rod and Gun Club during the Franklin County Fair. "I don't know when I've been at a show where the steers were fitted as well."

Weaver, who was named a Master Farmer in 1989, also spoke highly of the conformation classes. "The quality ran deep," he said, adding that it was a close decision between the grand champion and the reserve grand champion.

The Steer that came out on top was 1,250-pound heavyweight steer owned by David Sheiss, 15, of Chambersburg. Reserve grand champion honors went to a 1,195-pound medium heavyweight steer owned by Nicole Lebo of Greencastle.

The evening before, Nicole, 17, had been named Franklin County Fair Queen. During the steer show, Nicole's time was divided between showing her steer and handing out awards to the winners in the show. The Beef Club had sponsored Nicole in her bid for the fair queen title.

Nicole also won the champion fitter title at the beef show. Eric Sheiss, 18, of Chambersburg, was named champion showman.

Judge Weaver of Lancaster County owns and operates the 250-acre Weaverland Valley Farms, and has been a 4-H Club leader for 25 years.

Feathers, Skin Condition Of Birds Reveal Problems

HERBERT C. JORDAN
Associate Professor
Of Poultry Science
Penn State University

Feathers are frequently forgotten in health planning by most flock managers. All birds have several thousand feathers growing from follicles; each feather in its own follicle is controlled by many small muscles.

Bird health can be predicted by skin or feather condition on the live bird but most flock managers do not use this.

Let's assume each feather grows one to five inches long in five to 15 weeks time, depending on bird health, or its environment, nutrition, or the genetics of the bird. Therefore we see a possible equation: if 9,000 feathers on a turkey grow to an average length of three inches in seven weeks, we have 27,000 inches of feather growth in 49 days or 22.95 inches of feather growth per bird per hour for the entire seven weeks. This requires considerable nutrition and energy.

This feather growth can be stunted, slowed, distorted or stopped if the bird is sick or poorly cared for. If feathers look too short, dirty, twisted, and not complete, look for one or more of the following factors contributing to the problem:

- Too many birds in one pen so that each bird does not have enough space.
- Lighting too intense and too long a light day length so light becomes a stress.
- Not enough litter or litter too dirty or not dry enough. Wet or dirty litter causes toxic gas to be generated to slow feather growth as the bird breathes the gas.
- Cannibalism (where birds peck each other to death) can be made worse by inadequate nutrition, failure to feed boiled oats, or some other cannibalism retardant or birds that feel miserable and kill each other because air in the pen is too hot, humid, and stale. We must give birds more room and more fresh air. Adequate amounts of fresh, cool drinking water helps prevent cannibalism. Feather picking or pulling can cause skin or feathers to be severely damaged.
- Inadequate quality of feed for the particular breed or strain of bird, age of bird, or rate of bird performance. Low quality protein, fat in the feed, or inadequate or excessive vitamins, minerals, electrolytes, or fiber in the feed can cause abnormal feather growth.
- Poisoning birds from a misused coccidiostat or other medicine or careless use of pesticide or herbicide or heavy metal. A mineral or metal that has to be present for bird health at a low level, but which at high level is toxic, can cause feathers to break. Copper at 500 ppm in the ration appears to cause this condition. Be careful not to overfeed copper sulfate.

Observe feathers every day and expect feathers to be normal. Normal feathers harvested without damage can sometimes be sold for a reasonably high price.

Farm Family Wins Conservation Award

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maynard and Jane Gorssnickle of Myersville in Frederick County recently received a Good Earth Family Award.

This is for outstanding achievement in conserving soil and water resources and is presented by the National Endowment of Soil and Water Conservation.

The award was presented at the annual meeting of the Agricultural Communicators in Education in St. Paul, Minnesota. The Grossnickles were also honored at the Maryland Association of Soil Conservation Districts' annual summer meeting. One winner was named from each state in this nationwide competition.

The Grossnickles were cited for the comprehensive resource management system they implement on their farm. This includes cropland conservation tillage methods, cover crop and crop residue usage, contour stripcropping to reduce erosion, grassed waterways in drainage areas to control runoff, a buffer area along the streambank, an animal waste management system, and pastureland laid out to maximize use and regrowth of forage. In addition, the Grossnickles have woodland and areas on their farm for wildlife.

The state winners were selected from among several nominees by agricultural and conservation leaders.

The awards program, created and run by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation as an activity of its Good Earth Council, honors Good Earth Families who do an especially effective job of:

- Managing soil and water resources
- Preventing or reducing air and water pollution from agriculture
- Helping other producers and the public learn how and why to protect natural resources

"In this year of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, I congratulate the Grossnickles for winning this very prestigious award," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley Jr.

"The Grossnickles prove that farmers understand the land and the value of using it wisely," Cawley said.

The Grossnickles, along with the other state winners, will vie for further national honors. Their accomplishments will be evaluated by a technical advisory committee. Ten national finalists selected from the 50 will receive special recognition this fall. From the 10 finalists, three national winners will be honored in Washington in December.

TORQUE AMPLIFIERS & CLUTCHES

- ★ New Wider Heavy Duty Super Sprag 1-1/32" Wide
- ★ 5 Yr. Warranty Against Sprag Failure
- ★ Introductory Price $695.00

We are pleased to announce a major improvement in TA strength & performance backed up by a warranty that is unmatched in the industry. The 5/8" width Dana sprag which we have used over the past 10 years has proven its ability to perform under the most adverse of conditions and has achieved results that have sent our competitors scrambling to keep up. By increasing the width of the sprag to 1-1/32" and caging it in a heavier frame, we now have an unmatched shock load capacity and dramatically raised our load carrying ability. Our studies have shown that 90% of TA problems are directly related to sprag failure. We feel that we now have the strongest sprag & best rebuilt TA available and it will be warranted as follows:

*5 yr. - 100% parts & labor against sprag
*2 yr. - 100% parts & labor on remainder of unit

Our standard heavy duty TA is still available at $645.00 and carries a *2 yr - 100% parts & labor warranty.

*Certain restrictions apply and there will be a maximum labor pay-out of $450.00.

We also have units & parts available to rebuild old style TA's, including ramp & carrier sets. NEW price on ramps & carries - $200.00

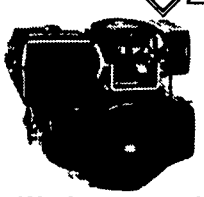
Is Your Corn Picker Engine In Shape To Handle This Year's Heavy Crop?



This twin 20 hp is becoming very popular for hay balers and other applications traditionally equipped with 2 cylinder Wisc. engines and can also replace the older 4 cylinder engines on some applications.

Works very well to run corn pickers, crimpers and mower crimper units. We can mount your Wisc. clutch reduction for $1495 or sell the engine with used Wisc. reduction for $1995. Price includes picking up your clutch and delivery of completed unit for you. (Lancaster County Only)

We Only Have A Limited Amount Of These Engines Available w/Reduction
Also Available:
20 HP (Same model) With STD Shaft To Run Hay Balers

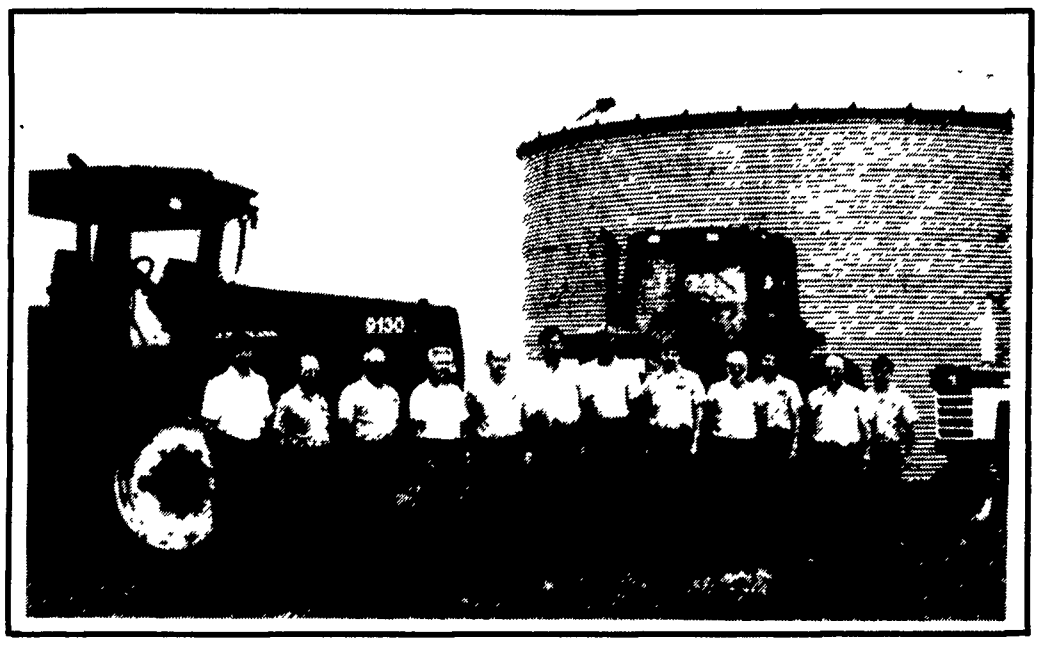
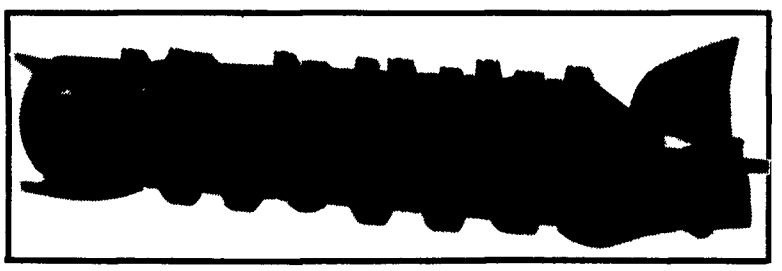
AXIAL FLOW ... One Step Ahead For



...OPERATION
...ECONOMY
...PERFORMANCE
...VALUE
...COMFORT
...HEADERS

THE AXIAL FLOW SYSTEM PUTS CLEAN, QUALITY GRAIN IN THE TANK...

The Case International XPE Axial-flow Combines feature a single, in-line mounted rotor that gets multiple chances to gently thresh your crop, and then separate it from straw, stalks, pods, and trash. So more of the crop gets harvested, with less damage.



THE ROTOR GENTLY THRESHES SEPARATES AND FEEDS THE CROP FOR EXTRAORDINARY RESULTS IN THE TANK.

Threshing and separating in a conventional combine takes as many as 16 moving parts. But threshing and separating in the Axial-Flow Combine utilizes just one moving part-- the rotor. It simply does a better job.

Although the Axial-Flow combine is built around the extraordinary performance strengths of the rotor, from header to straw spreader there are no weak links.

Hoober's professional combine servicemen have 14 years experience setting axial flow combines in a large variety of crops in most all types of field and weather conditions. When it comes to the KNOW-HOW of making the Axial-Flow combine perform, Hoober men know how.

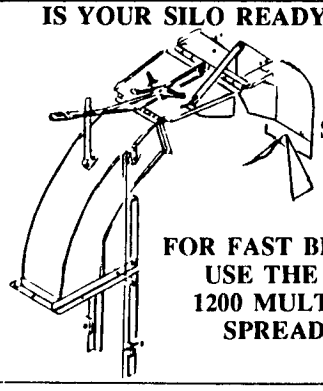
IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



FOR FAST BLOWING USE THE NEW 1200 MULTI-FLO SPREADER!

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

Leiby Tops Market Beef Show At Kutztown

BAL VAN TASSEL
Berks Co. Correspondent

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Jason Leiby, Hamburg R.D. 2, had his second grand champion market steer in three years at the Kutztown Fair.

Jason was happy with the animal's placing, but he was ecstactic about the steer's behavior at last week's show. "Boy, he was really calm. He was really excited at home," Jason said.

Jason Wisser, right, was surprised when he won the middleweight title but he was shocked when his steer was named reeserve champion. Todd Rabenold of the Kutztown FFA had the reserve middleweight champion.

While no one would accuse the Simmental cross of behaving like a puppy, the steer had improved markedly since the spring. "It took six people to hold him at the April show," said Jason's father, Kenneth Leiby.

Jason and his sister, Melissa, have some expert help choosing their 4-H projects. "My grandpa picks out our animals for us. He got mine at the Green Dragon," Jason said. Grandpa is Leroy Weist, the former owner of the Leesport Auction and Market.

Weist helps his grandchildren with some of their beef raising tasks, including dehorning. "He (the steer) jumps every time he sees grandpa," Jason said.

Leiby is a member of the Berks Co. 4-H Club. His 1,120 lb. steer will be available for sale at the Berks Co. 4-H Beef Sale, October 3 at the Leesport Market and Auction.

Jason Wisser of the Lehigh Co. 4-H was in shock when his Holstein/Simmental cross was named the reserve champion. The middle weight champion at 1,024 lbs. exhibited the typical Holstein colors combined with a Simmental build. "I'm really happy but I can't believe it," said Jason. The steer was Wisser's first reserve champion.

Wisser's reserve was bred by David Diehl of Kempton. "He's going to be really surprised too," Jason said.

The steer will be available at the Lehigh County 4-H roundup and sale October 13.

Gavin Grim, another Lehigh Valley 4-H'er, exhibited the lightweight champion. The steer weighed in at 978 pounds.

Gavin's brother Jason beat 25 other competitors to be named the grand champion fitter. Grim, the champion of the junior class, impressed judge Steve MacMahon. Traci Gelsinger received the reserve honors.

Market Beef Show

Erdenheim Farms for the last 10 years, took a great deal of time picking a champion showmen. After more than 25 minutes of deliberation, MacMahon chose two veteran showman, Amy Eshelman and Tammy Gelsinger, as the champion and reserve. MacMahon stated that both girls were excellent showmen and the differences separating them were small. Amy and Tammy are members of the Berks Co. 4-H Beef Club.

Jason Grim, left, earned the title of champion fitter at the Kutztown Beef Show while Traci Gelsinger picked up the reserve.

Breeding beef competition was light, with Alice Strause showing the champion and only Angus. Travis Werley exhibited all the Hereford entries. The only competition was in the Simmental classes, where Troy Gelsinger had the top animal.

THOUGHTS ON FALL MANAGEMENT OF ALFALFA

To cut or not to cut? That's the question faced by alfalfa growers every year when September rolls around. And, as usual, weather conditions during the summer of 1990 haven't helped. Once again, cutting schedules have frequently been messed up, and today you can find alfalfa stands at all stages of growth.

To start, let me repeat a statement I've made many times over the past years. You can't separate fall cutting management from other harvest management throughout the year. Take the first cutting early, at late bud of first flower, and when you cut in the fall can be important. On the other hand, delay first cutting to late bloom, and when you cut in the fall may not be very important.

Having said that, let's examine some of the more recent research findings in this area. To begin with, the recommendations we made 15 or 20 years ago were sound. Briefly, they were "avoid cutting alfalfa during the 4 to 6 weeks before the first killing frost." This period, often referred to as the full "critical period," occurs from early September through mid to late October in most northern states, but may begin in August in parts of Canada.

Plus, remember those recommendations were based on varieities and fertility programs in use at that time. Recent research in Michigan and Minnesota suggest that the recommendation not to cut during the fall critical period is too inflexible. Furthermore, researchers in those states say, the concept of a critical period is not always valid, particularly with use of winter-dormant, disease-resistant varieties and high soil fertility.

Multiple pest-resistant varieties

Almost without exception, varieties currently marketed in our area have sufficient winter-hardiness.

And, today, there's no shortage of newer varieties with adequate resistance to our major alfalfa diseases. You may recall I've defined adequate as moderate (MR) to high (H) resistance to all of the major diseases in your area, especially the so-called big 5 — bacterial wilt, verticillium wilt, anthracnose, phytophthora root rot, and fusarium wilt.

This summer, with the excessive rain and high humidity, we've seen a number of leaf diseases, too. And, while thse may affect quality, they're usually a very temporary problem.

Fertility important

Research also confirms that high levels of soil fertility, particularly potash, reduce the stress caused by fall cutting practices. In fact, there have been several reports from northern states and eastern Canada stating that fall cutting has little or no detrimental effects on stand productivity when alfalfa was adequately fertilized with potash.

Another point — alfalfa stands in the first full year of production are less susceptible to the negative effects of fall harvesting than other stands. This is explained by the greater overall stress resistance of younger plants, which is related to a lower incidence of disease infestation — and, I might add, insect pressure, especially from the soil-born insect clover root Curculio.

To sum up — use good judgement in your field alfalfa management. Generally, there's no harm in not cutting. But, winter-hardy, multi-pest-resistant varieties are better able to tolerate stress imposed by frequent harvests and fall cutting. Our high levels of soil fertility, especially potash, produce a healthier plant that can handle more fall stress.

Raytec Builds Large Scale

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Responding to the need for a larger scale capable of handling calves and sheep as well as hogs, Raytec Manufacturing has introduced the WayPig 500. Raytec also manufactures a WayPig litter scale and a WayPig 300 market hog scale.

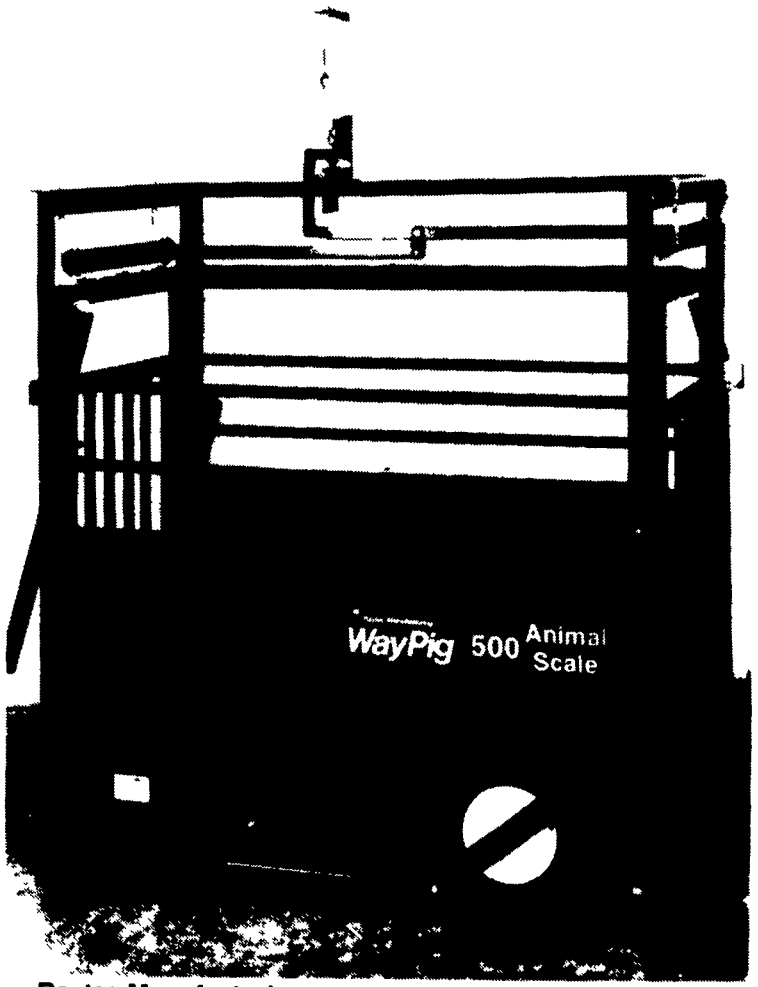
With wheels, the unit weighs 270 pounds and is 67 inches high by 29 inches wide by 53 inches long. It's made of Raytec's unique powder-coated steel, which holds up against rust even under worst conditions. The heavy-duty scale head is large and easy to read. WayPig 500's can also be ordered with wheels that can be quickly adjusted up for level weighing.

Gates on each end are easy to open; bars on the sides are removable. The animal can be observed from all four sides and can be accessed for injections from two sides.

Animals usually remain stable and calm in this carefully engineered scale. The bottom platform has a non-skid surface with no gaps on the side through which feet can slip. The entire unit — including walls — serves as the weighing area. An animal leaning against the sides won't prevent an accurate reading.

Also contributing to the WayPig 500's performance is a hydraulic damper which eliminates scale-pointer vibration, helping the user get an accurate reading much quicker than a balance-beam scale.

For more information on the new WayPig 500 animal scale, contact Richard Wingenroth, Raytec Manufacturing, 1381 Division Hwy., Ephrata, PA, 17522, (800) 233-0198.



Raytec Manufacturing recently introduced the WayPig 500, made of a powder-coated steel which holds up against rust even under worst-case conditions. The heavy-duty scale head is large and easy to read.

NCGA, Du Pont Honor Miller

WILMINGTON, DE — In support of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), Du Pont Agricultural Products recently awarded two free trips to the 1991 Corn Classic in Kansas City.

Lamar Miller, Manheim, will receive airfare and accommodations for two to the NCGA Corn Classic Feb. 20-22, 1991. Miller's entry was drawn from entries at the Du Pont booth at the 1990 Corn Classic in Phoenix.

"Du Pont supports corn growers in numerous ways other than just developing new ag products," said Don Weir, Du Pont product manager for Accent herbicide. "We encourage membership in the National Corn Growers Association and active involvement of its members in state and national programs."

This year Miller and his wife, Tricia, have 500 acres of corn, 270 acres of soybeans, and about 120 acres in alfalfa, wheat, and barley.

In 1988 and 1989, Miller won the Pennsylvania NCGA yield contest awards for no-till and no-till irrigated corn. Miller and his father, Andrew, also operate the family dairy farm of 80 cows.

Lamar Miller of Manheim, Pennsylvania, has attended the NCGA's Corn Classic a consecutive three years. After winning the Du Pont Accent sweepstakes, he and his wife, Tricia, will attend their fourth convention.

Pioneer Signs Agreement For Bio Grain Development

DES MOINES, IA — Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. announced the signing of a research agreement with the Plant Cell Research Institute (PCRI) of Dublin, California.

Carrol Bolen, corporate vice president and director of the specialty plant products (SPP) division of Pioneer, said the goal of the agreement is to develop grains with better balanced levels of essential amino acids, in proteins, for use as animal feed. Pioneer will fund research, conducted in PCRI's California laboratory, over the next three years. PCRI currently has 23 people working on the project.

According to Dr. Nick Frey, product development manager for SPP, the collaboration is a significant step, for Pioneer, in creating specialty grain products which add value to agriculture.

The companies hope to introduce new genes into crops such as soybeans, oilseed rape, sunflowers, and corn. Those genes will produce proteins with a better balance of essential amino acids for livestock and reduce the need to add synthetic amino acids to animal diets.

"In the case of soybeans or oilseed rape, the grain will be crushed for oil and the resulting meal with higher methionine or lysine will be sold to livestock feeders. Corn, with higher quality protein, can be directly fed but will require less supplements to provide a complete feed," said Frey.

"PCRI will be an excellent research partner in the development of grains with improved protein quality," said Dr. John Howard, director of biotechnology research for Pioneer. "PCRI has already introduced a gene from the Brazil nut into tobacco, which produces a methionine-rich storage protein. After the gene's introduction, they found a significant increase in methionine. Similar results in soybean or oilseed rape can produce a valuable feed product, perhaps by the mid-1990s."

Luther H. Smithson, vice president and chief operating officer at PCRI, sees the collaboration with Pioneer as providing the necessary infrastructure for the successful development of grains with enhanced protein quality.

Smithson said, "PCRI sees important potential value in the gene for high methionine protein and in its transformation and gene expression systems for oilseed rape and soybeans. Pioneer's contribution comes in the form of important technologies in corn transformation and in its strong seed breeding and development programs for oilseeds and corn. By working with Pioneer, PCRI technologies are most likely to reach the market as products of greater value to farmers and consumers."

Pioneer plans to grow these special grains, with the help of contract growers, in areas close to grain processors or livestock producers. To maintain the identity of the grain from production through processing, and final sale of the protein products, Pioneer will pay growers a premium.

"We see this collaboration in protein quality enhancement as a first step in our strategy of adding value to grain by developing useful proteins, oils and starches for livestock producers, grain processors, and consumers," said Dr. Frey.

Mini-Hopper Has New Power Pack

MOUNDRIDGE, KS — Grasshopper's new compact Model 411R Mini-Hopper features a new 338cc "Sovereign" OHV engine by Wisconsin-Robin and a new 41-inch deck option, in addition to the standard 35-inch deck. For increased operator comfort, the 411R is equipped with a padded high-back deluxe seat.

The Mini-Hopper delivers big mower performance and features without the big mower bulk. It's the ideal upgrade for homeowners and contractors tired of pushing and pulling "walk-behind" mowers to handle mowing in cramped quarters and difficult-to-reach areas. While it combines true zero-turning-radius maneuverability with easy-to-use dual-lever controls and outfront deck design to streamline mowing, its small size also simplifies transport, storage and accessibility to fenced yards. In fact, when equipped with the PTO-driven 35-inch deck, the 411R can pass through most standard yard gates.

Operation of the 411R is simple and straightforward. Dual-lever steering provides the operator with instinctively natural control of speed, steering, turns, braking, and all forward/reverse motion without pushing pedals and shifting gears. Outfront deck design and zero-turning-radius allow the Mini-Hopper to reach under low-hanging trees and shrubs, maneuver around and between tightly spaced obstacles, and mow square corners with totally unrestricted visibility at all times.

For lasting durability, the 411R Mini-Hopper incorporates a clutchless dual-hydrostatic drive and a unitized welded mainframe design to reduce maintenance while extending service life. A high-luster baked-on powder finish fights rust and corrosion while retaining its glossy beauty for years.

For quick dispersal of grass clippings and fall leaf cleanup jobs, an optional deck-driven grasscatcher with powerful vacuuming action can also be added. It features a rear-mounted collector, fitted with an easy-to-handle slide-in polyethylene container. The grasscatcher also features the Quik-D-Tatch® Vac Unit that can be removed or re-attached in minutes via a single pin.

For more information, write or call The Grasshopper Company, One Grasshopper Trail, P.O. 637, Moundridge, KS 67107, (316) 345-8621.

Grasshopper's new 411R features true zero-turn-radius maneuverability, with dual-hydrostatic drive, dual-lever control, and outfront deck design. The new 41-inch deck, above, is an additional option to the standard 35-inch outfront deck.

Doebler Announces New Alfalfas

JERSEY SHORE (Lycoming Co.) — Doebler's Hybrids has jumped into the alfalfa business with two winter-hardy, disease-resistant alfalfas for the East Coast.

The two new alfalfas — Starmaster and Precedent — were introduced to the public at Doebler's Farm Days here September 2. Visitors also had a chance to inspect 25 experimental alfalfas now on test at the farm.

According to owner Ted Doebler, this is a first for Doebler's Hybrids after 55 years in the seed corn business. The two alfalfas go on sale in seven states this month. They will be sold exclusively by Doebler's 315 dealers.

The veteran grower said the new Doebler alfalfas have been extensively tested in the East Coast since 1984 and have been found highly adaptable from northern New York to southern Virginia and Ohio.

"Buying disease resistant alfalfa varieties is the first step to top production, and we can offer two of the best," Doebler said.

He reported that both Starmaster and Precedent are resistant to bacteria wilt, verticillium wilt, anthracnose, fusarium wilt, and phytophthora root rot.

Doebler Precedent also is resistant to aphanomyces, a new root rot that has hurt yields and thinned stands in the eastern U.S., it was noted.

Eastern trial results have been impressive.

Doebler's Starmaster finished first out of 15 alfalfas in two years of Virginia tests, the veteran seed producer revealed, eight out of 62 alfalfas in two years of Pennsylvania trials and tied for second out of 16 varieties in 1986 New York tests.

Doebler Precedent averaged 6th out of 64 alfalfas in recent Pennsylvania trials and first out of 13 in New York 1988-1989 trials.

Wehr Pig Becomes Champ

VAL VAN TASSEL
Berks Co. Correspondent

QUAKERTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Amy Wehr's Hampshire cross was a grand champion for the second time in a week last Wednsday at the Lehigh Co. 4-H sale and roundup. The 250-pound pig topped the Kutztown Fair Market Hog Show six days earlier.

Wehr, the daughter of Elmer and Delores Wehr, Orefield, wasn't surprised by her second win, but she was happy with the results of her second swine roundup. "Sometimes judges place animals differently, but I was really hoping we'd win again," Amy said.

John Leidy of Leidy's Pork Products, Souderton, purchased the champion for $2.80 a pound. Ten-year-ld Amy already knew what she was going to do with the windfall. "I'm going to put it in the bank for college." Amy plans on entering the field of nursing.

The hog came from the Terry Bennecoff farm.

The reserve champion hailed all the way from Cedar Ridge, Illinois. Stephen Wessner, New Tripoli, R.D. 2, owned the 248 pound reserve. "It's a Landrace - Hampshire cross," Wessner said.

Wessner, 14, is a Landrace breeder and is the son of Harlan and Barbara Wessner. His hog was sold for $1.55 a pound to George's Food Liner, a supermarket in the Bethlehem area.

A total of 91 hogs were exhibited during the show and nine additional animals were sold in the afternoon. Roger Bankert, a York Co. swine breeder, served as the judge for the show. Thirty-four 4-H members exhibited animals at the event.

George's Food Liner, Bethlehem, was a big supporter of the Lehigh 4-H Swine Roundup. They not only bought the reserve champion hog owned by Stephen Wisser, but many other pigs as well. Nolan Stauffer, right, did the bidding for the supermarket.

Amy Wehr sold her 250-pound champion to Leidy's Pork Products of Souderton for $2.80 a pound. John Leidy also treated Amy to one of Leidy's famous caps.

Holstein Cow, Jersey Bull Take Supreme Titles At Allentown

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — A 3-year-old Holstein was named supreme champion cow of the Allentown fair last week while a young Jersey bull was named supreme champion bull.

The supreme judgement culminated a full day's competition in a 93-entry dairy show that is part of what is billed as Pennsylvania's largest fair.

The top titles are the highest trophy awarded to dairy animals at the Allentown Fair.

Though the dairy show and livestock areas represent about a tenth of the entire Allentown Fair, the five-breed dairy show continues to provide its intended purposes: to display the area's dairy animals, provide a forum for comparing local animals to give the non-dairy farming public an opportunity to see prime milk-producing animals.

Judge for the show was Ray Seidel, a Berks County Holstein farmer and breeder. He said the quality of all entries was good.

In deciding the supreme cow, owned and showed by Steven Dietrich, Seidel said he was "going to go with youth, an excellent udder with strong attatchments."

In selecting a Jersey bull over bulls from the other breeds, Seidel picked Mildred Seeds' young bull because it best showed dairy character and conformation.

Participants in the show do not advance to any other regional shows.

The results of the show were:

Grange Supports Regulation Change

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers would save time and money under proposed regulation changes in DER's bureau of dams and waterway management, according to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania State Grange.

More importantly, the proposed regulations would give farmers an additional boost toward improving conservation practices on their farms, said Shambaugh.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, which represents about 40,000 rural and farming Pennsylvanians, wholly supports the state Department of Environmental Resources' proposed changes to the permitting process for property owners who plan to install, operate, and maintain agricultural crossings and ramps in regulated waters.

The proposal would only require farmers obtain a general permit that would take less time to receive and not require a fee. Farmers currently need a water obstruction and encroachment permit, which entails a minimum 45-day review.

Individuals would still need to submit written notice to DER if these regulations go into effect. However, farmers would no longer have to pay a $50 application fee and complete a 5-page application.

These new regulations should be completed by the end of the year.

"The new system will greatly minimize the loss of time in securing appropriate approvals," said Shambaugh. "Farmers will appreciate the state's efforts to cut back the amount of paperwork involved in building crossings to accommodate their livestock or machinery."

Du Pont Discovers Sulfonylurea-Tolerant Gene

ROCHELLE, IL — New "STS" soybeans carry a gene that has enhanced sulfonylurea herbicide tolerance, opening the door for improved cost-effective, reliable, and environmentally compatible weed control.

Du Pont unveiled the discovery here at its agricultural research station, where the results of the six-year research effort were seen growing in the field.

"When certain sulfonylurea herbicides are applied to a field of soybeans, the effect is stunning," said Scott Sebastian, Du Pont plant breeder. "Rows of STS soybeans thrive in a totally weed-free environment, while rows of non-tolerant beans are severely damaged by the same use rates."

The dramatic demonstration is the result of a project to actively select for soybeans with enhanced sulfonylurea tolerance. Researchers identified a soybean plant that contains a modified acetolactate synthase (ALS) enzyme that is not inhibited by sulfonylurea herbicides. The soybean gene, Alsl, carries the sulfonylurea-tolerant trait. "Other gene traits, such as protein and oil content and other key marker enzymes, remain unchanged in the new sulfonylurea-tolerant soybeans," said Sebastian.

"Sulfonylurea herbicides are

Acreage Reporting Results Updated

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Final acreage reporting results as of August 25, 1990, indicate that acreage reports have been filed by farm operators for 400 farms in Lancaster County. Producers on 70 farms are eligible for 1990 farm program benefits.

Ray A. Brubaker, county executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said farm program participants reported 21,560 acres of planted program crops, 215 acres of cropland diverted for payment under the Conservation Reserve Program, and 500 acres of cropland for the acreage conservation reserve.

The acreage reporting process on participating farms means that those producers who are in compliance with provisions of the 1990 progarms are eligible for price support loans and target price protection on 290 wheat acres and 4,200 feed grain acres. Brubaker said price support loans will be available to the program participants at $2.11 per bushel for wheat. The farmers are also eligible for target price protection at $4.00 per bushel for wheat, $2.75 for corn, $2.36 for barley, and $1.45 for oats.

"To be eligible for these benefits, it was necessary for farmers to have enrolled in the programs during the signup, but benefits are based on their reported or measured acreage instead of intentions," said Brubaker.

The acreage reduction programs are designed to maintain a level of stocks in line with market demand.

Sulfonylurea-Tolerant Gene

associated with a number of positive characteristics, including low use rates and low toxicity to man and wildlife," Sebastian said. "STS soybeans will permit farmers to incorporate these environmentally sound, effective herbicides applied at fractions of an ounce per acre into their existing weed management programs, replacing other herbicides applied at pounds per acre."

Du Pont "Classic," "Canopy," "Pinnacle," "Preview," "Gemini," and "Lorox Plus" are among the sulfonylurea herbicides available to soybean farmers. With the presence of STS soybeans in the marketplace, Du Pont expects to introduce additional choices of environmentally compatible, cost-effective weed-control options.

"Until now, crop tolerance has been one of the first criteria in determining which candidate will be advanced for further produce development," said Sebastian. "Research can now increase its focus on environmental compatibility criteria such as short residual, low use rates, rotational freedom, and minimizing environmental impact."

Marketing agreements with leading North American seed companies are now under way, according to Mike Hughes, Du Pont product development manager. "The sulfonylurea-tolerant STS germplasm has been released to commercial breeders and is being bred into seed lines that exhibit superior agronomic traits." A few varieties are projected to be on the market in 1994; widespread commercial availability is anticipated for the mid- to late-1990s.

Since variation for sulfonylurea tolerance existed in nature but was extremely rare, Sebastian used standard breeding methods to develop a unique selection system that allowed him to efficiently screen large numbers of soybean plants for tolerance. This strategy yielded a few soybean plants containing a sulfonylurea-tolerant ALS enzyme.

"The potential of this discovery became obvious once the research and development team witnessed thriving soybean plants that had been treated with sulfonylurea herbicides that would typically injure common soybeans," said Sebastian. "There was no hint of crop injury, and there were no weeds."

ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION AND STORAGE OF AVIAN SEMEN

Herb Siegel
Department of Poultry Science

We are all familiar with the use of artificial insemination in the reproduction of dairy and beef cattle, swine, and sheep.

In the modern poultry industry, almost all of the fertile turkey eggs are provided by artificial insemination. There has been a gradual increase in its use in broiler and roaster chicken production, mostly at the primary or grandparent stage of breeding.

However, a problem in the use of artificial insemination in poultry has been that storage of poultry semen in the frozen state has not been very successful. The fertility of the semen following thawing declines dramatically, and therefore insemination must be done within several hours after the semen has been collected.

This poor storage capacity limits the distance that avian semen can be transported and also limits its storage as a valuable germinal material.

However, research in the laboratories of Dr. Guy Barbato, Department of Poultry Science and Dr. Roy Hammerstedt, Department of Molecular and Cell Biology at Penn State, is trying to solve this problem of poor storage of avian semen. Using genetically selected lines of chickens that produce semen with higher than normal capacity for fertilization after frozen storage, the scientists are studying the factors that protect the semen against freezing damage.

Paradoxically, they have found that the semen from the birds selected for high frozen storage capability has lower than normal fresh fertilization capacity. This result suggests that there is a factor, or factors, in fresh semen that enhance fertilization ability, but may somehow inhibit frozen storage.

The solution to the problem of poor storage capacity of avian semen would lead to important advances in the breeding of improved varieties of fowl. Such improvement will lead to lower cost to the consumer.

N.E. Farmers May Have Better Way To Till

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — An innovative cultivation method called slit tillage may reduce rainfall runoff and improve soil conservation on northeastern row crop fields, according to a Penn State researcher.

"With conventional chisel tooth plowing, the teeth are placed every 6 to 8 inches and dig in from 6 to 10 inches," says Dr. James Hamlett, assistant professor of agricultural engineering. "Slit tilling uses a chisel tooth plow, but the rows are 30 inches apart and go down 14 to 16 inches. The plow doesn't invert the soil, but leaves a slit in the ground."

The suggested advantages to slit tillage include enhanced infiltration of water into the soil and reduced runoff with a layer of undisturbed residue on the surface of the field, according to Hamlett.

"A farmer in Lancaster County has been using slit tillage for about 10 years and claims he has substantially reduced erosion," said Hamlett.

Erosion is a problem for farmers in Pennsylvania and throughout the northeast. The average erosion loss rate on cropland in Pennsylvania is estimated to be 5.3 tons of soil per acre each year. An acceptable rate of soil loss is 1 to 4 tons per acre, depending on the type of soil.

Forty percent of the cropland in Pennsylvania has erosion rates that are considered intolerable, according to Hamlett. In 1988, there were nearly 6 million acres of cropland in Pennsylvania.

"If this type of erosion continues, there will be decreased productivity for this land," said Hamlett.

"One way to reduce soil loss is to leave more crop residue on the surface," said Hamlett. Crop residue consists of the parts of the plant left after harvesting — stalks, leaves, roots. "A good goal would be to have 30 percent of the ground covered by residue."

According to Hamlett, no-till farming is the prime example of this conservation method, but cannot be practiced in all situations. "Slit tillage may be able to maintain crop productivity at the same yield as other methods and may also decrease runoff and erosion."

The objective in slit tilling is to create slits and fracture the earth between the slits so that rainwater can infiltrate the ground and not run off.

While rain water run off causes erosion, surface and subsurface run off from agricultural land is also a potential water pollution problem. The runoff, and the sediment it carries, transport nitrogen and phosphorus that is often available from the increased use of commercial fertilizer and animal manure.

Penn State researchers have been looking at the benefits of slit tillage for the past five years, but this year they have begun conducting totally controlled field trials.

Twenty-two 45 by 70 foot plots have been set up at Penn State's Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs. Separate plots will be planted using conventional moldboard plow, chisel tooth plow, no till, ridge tilling, fall slit tilling, and spring slit tilling. Each plot will have a one hundredth acre area set up for run off collection.

"We would like to see if slit tilling or ridge tilling have advantages in Pennsylvania and subsequently the entire northeastern United States," said Hamlett. He will be looking at erosion rates, nitrogen, and phosphorous in the runoff and for overall productivity of the plots.

"The reason we are slit tilling in the fall and spring is that currently, in Lancaster County, the farmers are tilling in the fall and then light discing in the spring before planting," said Hamlett.

"I don't think the secondary tillage operation is necessary," said Hamlett. "I think the seed can be planted using no-till planters."

Warren's 4-H Competitors Yield Winners

WARREN (Warren Co.) — The 60th annual Warren County Fair was full of shows, judging, and other activities.

An integral part of each year's fair are the various 4-H livestock shows and roundups. The fair, for the most part, is the culmination of the entire year for the 4-H member and his/her project.

According to James Cowden, extension agent, there are nearly 200 active 4-H members in the animal science related clubs.

4-H Light Horse

The Saturday before the fair, the Warren County 4-H horse roundup was held. Nearly sixty 4-Hers competed in more than 40 different performance classes hoping for the opportunity to advance to the District 4-H Horse Show, September 8-9, at the Crawford County Fairgrounds.

On Tuesday of the fair, 4-H members competed in showmanship, grooming, and various horse halter classes. The top senior showman was Michelle Leach of Russell. Leach was also selected as the champion master fitter in the senior division.

The other blue award winners in the senior class were Sonna DeVore and Sonya Kellogg. Red rosettes were won by Sean Lore, Melissa Haehn, and Jolinda Dexter. In the intermediate group, Teresa Grosch of Russell was selected the best in showmanship. Kirk Guiher of Sugar Grove was chosen as master fitter, and he earned a blue showmanship award.

Other showmanship awards were earned by Jennifer Bloomgren, blue; Tracie Baker and Joanna Carr, red; and Jamie Cressley and Heather Sleeman, white. The outstanding junior in both showmanship and fitting was Jessica Kiser of Russell. Patrick Guiher won a blue rosette in showmanship. Red awards were presented to Amanda Rapp, Kelly Kuzminski, and Tracy Bloomgren. The white winners were Jackie Lore and Carrie McDannel.

The 4-H members were permitted to enter one of the halter classes. Placings in these classes were: Registered Mare- 1. Kirk Guiher; 2. Patrick Guiher; 3. Heather Sleeman; Registered Gelding- 1. Jennifer Bloomgren; 2. Carrie McDannel; 3. Sonna DeVore; Grade Mare- 1. Michelle Leach; 2. Jamie Cressley; Grade Gelding- 1. Kelly Kuzminski; 2. Sean Lore; 3. Marnie Rapp; Pony Mare 50" and Under- 1. Teresa Grosch; 2. Jessica Confer; Pony Mare 50-56"- 1. Jessica Kiser; 2. Amanda Rapp.

4-H Market Lambs

The second year as a member of the 4-H Shamrock Sheep Club was the charm for 14-year-old Josh Anderson of Russell.

Anderson's grand champion lamb weighed 126 pounds and caught the judge's eye in the heavyweight market lamb class. The reserve champion market lamb was owned and shown by Meghan Scott of Bear Lake.

This is Scott's first year in the 4-H club. Her lamb weighed 116 pounds. The other weight class champions in this year's 4-H market lamb show are lightweight- Jolene Cross of Bear Lake, champion; Valerie Benedict of Bear Lake, reserve champion; mediumweight- Julie Brown of Warren, champion; Ann Ekdahl of Chandlers Valley, reserve champion.

In showmanship competition, Matt Burlingame of Russell won the senior division, Jerry Van Ord of Russell topped the intermediate division, and Erik Brown of Warren won the junior division. Other junior 4-H members who placed in showmanship included Kyle Anderson, Meghan Scott, Erin Wright, and Jolene Cross.

Intermediate members (age 12-14) who earned awards were Joshua Anderson, Julie Brown, Tim Kireta, and Jenny Eckman. Senior showmen included Pam Lyon, Tammy Kireta, Toby Angove, and Valerie Benedict.

The blocking contest, where the 4-H member grooms a lamb in a timed event, had a record 15 winners. Those earning master fitter awards were Pam Lyon, Valerie Benedict, Herb Anderson, Tim Kireta, Tammy Kireta, Josh Anderson, Jason Jaquay, Todd Jaquay, Paul Ekey, Ann Ekdahl, Elaine Ekdahl, Tony Angove, Matt Burlingame, Conrad Hultman, and Jerry Van Ord. Other competitions in this skill event included Meghan Scott, Julie Brown, Erik Brown, Kyle Anderson, Erin Wright, Jolene Cross, Jnny Eckman and Joe Van Ord.

Junior Dairy Show

The supreme champion of the Warren County Fair's Junior Dairy Show was no surprise. Melissa Wilcox of Russell showed her six-year-old Holstein cow, Ivy, to win the senior champion and grand champion honors of the Holstein breed. She was also selected the supreme champion of all the dairy breeds.

The champions and reserve champions of the other breeds included Richard Gilkinson of Russell won grand champion honors with his four-year-old Brown Swiss cow named Angel. The reserve grand champion Brown Swiss was exhibited by Carrie Swanson of Russell. Her five-month-old calf, Tina was selected over some older heifers. Two sisters captured top honors in the Jersey breed. Deborah Callan of Sugar Grove won grand champion with her three-year-old cow called Valerena Chief. Her sister, Laura Callan, showed a five-year-old cow named Bess to the reserve champion honors.

The grand champion Guernsey cow, Cassandra, was shown by Belmer Hitchcock of Russell. Jeffrey Gourley of Sugar Grove earned reserve champion honors with his senior two-year-old cow, Princess. The best Ayrshires were shown by Carrie Swanson of Russell and Tonya Gilkinson of Russell. Carrie's grand champion was a senior calf called Jackie. Tonya's reserve champion was a yearling heifer named Nicki. The reserve champion of the holstein breed was shown by Matthew Wilcox of Russell. His four-year-old cow named Barbara finished second to his sister's grand champion.

An important part of the 4-H dairy program is the members' demonstration of showmanship and fitting skills on their animals. Members compete against one another according to various age groups — junior (age 8-11), intermediate (age 12-14), and senior (age 15-18). Associate members, those under eight years of age, competed in a special class.
